the will of the Lord, and in the midst of his trials and tribulations, he was able to maintain his faith and hope in the Lord, and to love and serve him with all his heart, mind, and strength, and to love his neighbor as himself. And this is the will of the Father, that we should love him, and keep his commandments, that we may abide in his love, and that we may bring forth much fruit to the glory of the Father. And this is the love that the Father has put in our hearts, that we should love one another, and keep his commandments, that we may abide in his love, and that we may bring forth much fruit to the glory of the Father. And this is the love that the Father has put in our hearts, that we should love one another, and keep his commandments, that we may abide in his love, and that we may bring forth much fruit to the glory of the Father.

The Practice of Conveyancing,

Of Deeds of Gift.

THE word gift imports no more than the transferring of the property of a thing from one to another without a valuable consideration.

A gift is of a larger extent than a feoffment, which is always applied to corporeal and immoveable things. For a gift is applied to things moveable or immoveable, as trees, cattle, household-stuff, &c. the property whereof is and may be altered as well by gift as by sale or grant.

And in this sense a gift is sometimes by act of the party, as when one man gives a thing to another.

And this is or may be either by word or by writing.

And sometimes it is by act of law; as when a woman is married to a husband, or one is made executor to another; in these cases by the marriage only, or taking of the executorship, the law gives all the goods of the woman to the husband, and of the testator to his executor.

So where one takes my goods as a trespasser, and I recover damages for them upon a suit in law; in this case the law gives him the property of the goods, because he has paid for them.

But the word gift is sometimes taken more strictly, and applied to a conveyance or passing of an estate of lands or tenements to another (only) in tail, wherein the word dedi is most commonly used.

And then he who gives the land is called the donor, and he to whom it is given the donee.

And this by the common law was for the most part by deed, though it might be by parol. But see the stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3.

By the stat. 3 H. 7. c. 4. (reciting that oftentimes deeds of gift of goods and chattels had been made, to the intent to defraud creditors) it is enacted, that all deeds of gift of goods and chattels made or to be made of trust, to the use of that person or persons that made the same deed of gift, be void and of none effect. See the stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. & 13 Eliz. c. 5.

By giving all one's goods there seems to be a secret trust and confidence, that the donee shall deal favourably with the donor in respect of his poverty, or permit him, or some other for his benefit or use, to be in possession, &c.

And therefore when any gift shall be made in satisfaction of a debt, let it be made,

1. In a publick manner before neighbours, and not in private.

Dona clandestina sunt semper suspiciosa. 3 Co. 80.

Clausula inconsuetæ semper inducunt suspicionem. Ibid.

2. Let the goods and chattels be appraised to the full value, and the gift made in satisfaction of the debt.

3. After the gift, let the donee take possession of them; for the continuance of the possession in the donor is a sign of a trust. Wood's Inst. B. 2. c. 6.

For more concerning these deeds of gifts of immoveable or moveable things, see title Deed and Grant in toto, wherein all the learning touching this matter is involved; for the words gift and grant are often confounded.

Of Grants.

(A) Grants what, and Grantor and Grantee who.

THE word grant, taken largely, is where any thing is granted or passed from one to another. And in this sense it comprehends feoffments, bargains and sales, gifts, leases, charges, and the like; for he that gives or sells grants also. In this case it is sometimes in writing or by deed, and sometimes by word without writing.

But a grant in a stricter sense and properly is a conveyance in writing of such an incorporeal thing as lies in grant, and not in livery, and which cannot pass by word only without deed. Or it is the grant of such persons as cannot pass any thing from them but by deed, as the king, bodies corporate, &c. And although it may be made by other words, yet it is most commonly made by the word grant, as being proper to the purpose. Co. Lit. 172, 332. a. Finch's Law 29.

Amongst hereditaments, some are such as are said to lie in livery, i. e. such as whereof livery of seisin may be made, as manors, houses, lands, &c. And some are such as do not lie in livery, i. e. whereof no livery of seisin can nor needs to be made, but they pass by the delivery of the deed without any more; and of this sort are rents, reversions, services, advowsons in gross, and the like; which things cannot pass from man to man without deed or matter of record, which is of a higher nature than a deed. Co. Lit. 49.

He who makes a grant is called the grantor, and he to whom it is made is called the grantee.

(B) Kinds of Grants.

SOME grants are of the land or soil itself, and some are of some profit to be taken out of or from the soil, as rent, common, &c.

And some are of goods and chattels, and some are of other things, as authorities, elections, &c.

And they are made sometimes by matter of record, and sometimes by deed or writing in the country, and sometimes by word without either.

Some grants also tend to charge the grantor with something he was not charged with before, and some to pass something out of him to the grantee; and some tend to discharge the grantee of something wherewith he was charged or chargeable before, and whereof he is now hereby discharged.

(C) What Grants must (or may not) be by Deed in Writing.

BY the stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. No leases, estates or interests, either of freehold or terms of years, or any uncertain interest, not being copyhold or customary interest, of, in, to or out of any messuages, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments, shall at any time be assured, granted or surrendered, unless it be by deed or note in writing, signed by the grantor, &c. or their agents, lawfully authorized by writing, or by act and operation of law.

Before this statute the common law stood thus as to what grants should be by deed, or might be by word; and the same laws, as far as they are not within the same statute, still remain in force.

By the common law corporations, as dean and chapter, mayor and commonalty, and such like, regularly can neither grant lands, goods or chattels, but it must be by deed. Corporations.

But the grantees of such persons, and all other common persons, might (before the stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3.) grant or give any thing which lies in livery, as manors, houses, lands, and such like things, in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, for years, or at will, by word without deed.

And if a lease was made of any such thing for life or years, with a remainder over in fee-simple, fee-tail or for life; it was good, although it were by word without any deed in writing. Perk. § 64. 4 H. 7. 17. Plow. 150. 16 H. 7. 3. Lit. § 60.

And

Rents, services, &c.

And such things as are said to lie in grant and not in livery, could not be granted or given, had or taken without deed, unless it were in some special cases.

And therefore rents and services, and such things which are in gross, and not incident to some other thing, may not be granted without a deed; and therefore if a rent-charge be granted unto me for years, I may not grant this rent over without deed. And if there be lord and tenant of arable land by fealty, and the service of yielding the tenth sheaf of corn before it be sowed; the lord cannot grant this service for years without deed.

But if a rent, or any service be parcel of or incident to a manor, or any other thing which is grantable without deed; in this case by the grant of the principal by word this thing might pass belonging thereunto, without any deed.

Also rents or services might be granted upon a partition by one coparcener to another without deed. Co. Lit. 49. Dyer 439. Perk. § 60, 61, 63. Bro. Grant. 59.

Reversion, or remainder.

A reversion could not be granted in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life or years without deed, unless it be in case where it is parcel of a manor.

But a reversion might be granted upon a partition by one coparcener to another without any deed. And the same law was of a remainder. And therefore if one made a lease for life or years to one, the remainder in fee-simple, fee-tail or for life to another without deed; howsoever this was a good remainder in the first creation without deed, yet this remainder could not be granted over without deed. Perk. § 61. Dyer 174. Plow. 433. Bro. Grant. 104.

Advowson, tithes, &c.

A parsonage or rectory, although it consisted of nothing but tithes, and the like, besides the church and church-yard, and had no house nor glebe belonging to it, yet it might be granted without deed in fee-simple for life or years, and then the tithes and offerings would pass as incident.

But the tithes alone, or a portion of tithes, oblations, mortuaries or obventions, were not grantable by themselves without deed. 15 H. 7. 8. 16 H. 7. 2. 19 H. 8. 12. 21 H. 6. 43.

And therefore a lease parol of tithes, although it was but for years, was not good.

And if the parson agreed with one of his parishioners that he should have his own tithes; this was not a good grant of the tithes, neither might it be pleaded or used so, but perhaps by way of agreement a parishioner might retain his tithes. 36 El. B. R.

And if a lessee for years of tithes will grant it over to another at will only, it could not be done without deed, as was held by baron Denham, 2 Car. at Sarum assizes.

And yet it was held, that a parson might grant his tithes from year to year to him that was to pay them, without any deed; but this was by way of retainer. Mic. 8 Jac. Dr. Longworth's case.

But this grant or agreement might be made to and with the party himself that was to pay the tithes, and not with another: neither could this interest be assigned, or a stranger take advantage of it, as hath been agreed in the case of Hawkes and Brasfield, Pasch. 3 Jac. B. R.

And an advowson in gross could not be granted without deed; even the grantee of the grantee of an advowson is to shew both the deeds.

But an advowson was grantable upon a partition between coparceners without deed.

And an advowson incident to a manor or piece of land was grantable with the manor or land without any deed.

The next avoidance to a church was not grantable without deed. 21 Ed. 3. 38. 11 H. 4. 3 Dyer 29, 10 Co. 1. Plow. 150. 9 Ed. 4. 47.

Common of pasture, &c.

Common of pasture, estovers, turbary, fishing, &c. could not be granted in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life or years, unless it be in case of partition, or of appendancy, as incident to some corporeal thing without deed.

And therefore if a man granted by word of mouth to me common for twenty beasts in this manor; this would not be good.

Neither if it was granted to me by deed, might I grant this over to another without deed.

But if a man had common of pasture appendant or appurtenant to his land; in this case he might grant his land with the common appendant by word only without any deed. Perk. § 61.

Franchises, &c.

Franchises, as fairs, markets, courts, warrens, and the like, or other profits thereof, were not grantable without deed.

Hundred.

But a hundred was grantable without deed, for there is liberum tenementum.

The profits of a mill, country, ferry, corrody, or the like, were not grantable without deed. 15 H. 7. 8.

Things

Things in action, as a right or title of action that only depends in action, and things of that nature, as rights and titles of entry to any real or personal thing, are not grantable at all but by way of release to the tenant of the land, &c. by which means it may be extinguished: but this neither may not be without deed. Things in action, &c.

And therefore if a man takes my goods as a trespasser, or I deliver him my goods to keep, and after I will give these goods to him, I cannot do this without deed. 6 H. 7. 9. Dyer 91, 126. Doct. & Stud. 16.

An election, condition, covenant, assent, licence or liberty, cannot be created and annexed to an estate of inheritance or freehold without deed. Dyer 281.

A privilege to hold land for life without impeachment of waste, is not grantable without deed.

Offices for the most part are not grantable without deed.

And yet some inferior offices, as stewards, bailiffs, and the like, are; for such officers a lord of a manor may retain by word without deed. 9 Co. 9. Offices.

Most chattels real and personal might be given and granted without deed. Chattels.

And therefore if a man by word of mouth granted, gave or sold me his lease for years, the wardship of body and land, or the wardship of land that he had by reason of a tenure by knight's service, or by grant from the king, or granted or sold me the trees standing upon his ground, the corn growing upon his land, his horse, sword, plate, or other household-stuff; this is a good grant or gift. But the wardship of the body of an heir only, cannot be granted without deed.

So a next presentation cannot be granted without deed. Perk. § 57, 60. Bro. Donne 1. Dyer 10. 5 H. 7. 35, 36. Plow. 150.

(D) Things necessary to every good Grant.

Regularly these things are requisite in every good grant or gift:

1. That there be a grantor, donor, &c. and that he be a person able to grant, and not disabled by any legal or natural impediment.

2. That there be a grantee, donee, (a) &c. and that he be a person capable of the thing granted, and not disabled to receive it.

3. That there be a thing granted, and that the thing be such a thing as is grantable.

4. That it be granted in that order and manner the law requires: as where the thing is not grantable without deed, that it be done by deed (b)

And if it be done by deed, that the deed have apt words to describe and set forth the person of the grantor and grantee, and thing granted, &c. and that all necessary circumstances, as sealing and delivery, and livery of seisin, and attornment, where it is needful, be observed.

5. That there be an agreement to and acceptance of the grant or thing granted by him to whom it is made, and for default in either of these particulars a grant may be void.

In acquirendo rerum dominio, scilicet quod donationes non valent, licet sint inceptae, nisi sint perfectae.

But if grants be very antient, and things granted have been enjoyed according to the grant ever since the making of it; in this case the grant may be good notwithstanding some legal defect in some of these particulars. Co. 73. Plow. 555. Perk. § 1. Bro. Grant 89.

Supra Vol. 1. Fol. 173. 175.

(E) Who may be a Grantor.

TWO things are requisite relative to the grantor:

First, That the grantor be a person able to grant.

Secondly, That if the grant be by deed, that he be sufficiently described and set forth, either by his proper name, or else by some other matter of distinction.

Note therefore, that whosoever may be a feoffor, may be a grantor.

And any natural, politick or corporate body (not prohibited by law, as monk, friar, Natural or woman covert, infant, and such like) may be grantor, donor, &c. and the grants of such politick bodies will be good. Perk. § 3.

(a) A grant to J. S. or J. N. is bad for the uncertainty although it be delivered to J. S. for the delivery of the deed cannot make a void grant good or take effect.

(b) A thing that cannot begin without deed, may not be granted without deed; as a rent charge, fair, &c.

- Alien. An alien may and is able to grant or give any thing that he is capable to have or take by grant or gift.
- Person attainted or outlawed. A person attainted of treason or felony may give or grant his land; and this is good against all others besides the king and the lord of whom his land is held.
And he may grant and give his goods to relieve himself in prison; and this will be good against all others, and the king and lord also.
A person outlawed in a personal action, may give or grant his goods or chattels, and the gift or grant will be good against all others but the king. Perk. § 26.
- Feme covert. The queen may, without the agreement of the king, make grants, gifts, &c. of her lands or goods; but another woman that has a husband cannot give or grant her lands or goods without her husband's consent, unless it be in some special cases.
And although she recites by the deed that she is sole and not covert, yet this will not help.
And if the case be so, that by agreement between her and her husband there be a certain portion of her husband's lands or goods allotted unto her to dispose of and manage at her pleasure, yet she alone without her husband can make no good grant or gift of any part of these lands or goods.
But if she grants any thing by fine, and the husband does not avoid it during the coverture; this grant will bind her after his death.
And if she makes a gift or grant of her husband's goods, it is thought this is not good until her husband agrees to it. Co. Lit. 3. Perk. § 8, 20, 41.
- Infant. An infant cannot make any gift or grant, &c. that is good but in special cases: for if he makes any grant or gift that takes effect by the delivery of the deed only; as if he grants a rent-charge out of his land, or makes a feoffment with a letter of attorney, or gives livery of seisin, or gives or sells his horse, and the buyer or donee takes him himself; these are void ab initio. (a)
And if the grant or gift takes effect by the delivery of his own hand; as if he makes a feoffment, and gives livery of seisin himself, or sells a horse and delivers him with his own hands; this is voidable by the infant himself, or others that shall have his right, &c.
But if an infant grants any thing by fine; this must be avoided during his minority, or else it cannot be avoided at all. 9 H. 7. 24. 26 H. 8. 2. Perk. § 12, 13, 14, 19. 7 H. 4. 5.
- Durefs. All grants that are made by durefs, are voidable by the parties themselves that make it, or others that have their estates, &c.
But if it be done by fine, it is good and unavoidable. Perk. § 16.
- Non sane memorie. All gifts, grants, &c. made by deed in the country, by those that are de non sane memorie, are good against themselves, but voidable by those that are their heirs, executors, or have their estate; but if it be by fine, it is good and unavoidable. 4 Co. 123, 124.
- Born dumb, &c. A man that is born dumb, or dumb and deaf, if he has understanding, may by delivery of the deed and making of signs, make a good grant, gift, &c.
But a man that is born deaf, dumb and blind, cannot. Perk. § 25.
- Bastard. A bastard may give or grant as well as any other man, after he has got a name by reputation. Perk. § 20.
- Parson. A parson may grant any thing belonging to his parsonage for no longer time than for his own life, and therein likewise but during his residence, although he has the consent of the patron and ordinary.
- Corporation. Neither the head without the members of a corporation, nor the members without the head, as dean without the chapter, or chapter without the dean, may give or grant any of the lands belonging to the corporation. Perk. § 31, 32, 33.
- Executors. One executor or administrator may give or sell any of the goods of the deceased, and this is good to bind all the rest.
For more concerning who may grant, &c. see before, Vol. 1. fol. 126. 160.

(F) Of naming the Grantor.

TH E name of the persons in grant is set down only to distinguish persons, and to make the person intended certain: and therefore notwithstanding it is best and most safe to describe the person by his true and proper name of baptism, and also by his surname; and if it be a corporation, by the true name whereby the corporation is made; yet mistakes in this case, unless they are very gross, will not make void the grant. Nilil facit error nominis cum de corpore constat.

(a) If a parson, prebend, or the like be within the age of 21 years, and grant a lease of his benefice, within age, this shall bind him; for as he is admitted by the ecclesiastical law, to take a benefice within age, the law of England makes him capable to lease his benefice within age. Bro. Age, 80.

And therefore if one that is a bastard has got a name by reputation in the place where he lives, or another man has got another name by common esteem than his own right name, or is usually called by another name than his true name in the place where he lives; in these cases they may grant by this name, and the grant is good.

And if a man be baptized by one name, and after be confirmed by another, some have said he may grant by either of these names. Sed quere.

And if, John at Stile grants by the name of William at Stile; this grant is good. Et sic de similibus. 6 Co. 63. Co. Lit. 3. Perk. § 41, 39.

And these grants are good, especially when there is some other addition to make it more certain; as when a duke, marquis, earl or bishop, grants by their names of honour or dignity, and grant without any name, or with a false name of baptism, as when the duke of Suffolk by the name of the duke of Suffolk, without any more words; or by the name of William duke of Suffolk, when his name is John; or the bishop of Norwich grants so: these are good grants, because there is but one such duke and one such bishop within the kingdom.

So if a dean and chapter, mayor and commonalty, grant by the name of their corporation without any addition of christian or surname; it is good. Fitz. Grant 67. Perk. § 42.

And especially these grants are good when the true name appears in some other part of the deed; as when John at Stile recites by his deed that his name is John at Stile, and by the same deed grants by the name of Thomas at Stile. Or Alice at Stile, reciting by her deed that she is a feme covert, when in truth she is sole. Perk. § 40.

But if an ordinary man grants by his surname only without any name of baptism, or by his name of baptism without any surname at all: in these and such like cases for the most part of the grant will be void for uncertainty, unless there be some other matter in the deed to help it, or some other matter done ex post facto to supply it; for in some cases where the thing granted lies in livery, such a mistake or uncertainty in the grant may be helped by the livery of seisin upon the deed afterwards. 3 H. 6. 26. Perk. § 38, 42.

And so also it is in the names of corporations; for if the variance and mistake by omission or alteration be only in some small matter, so as it is literal and verbal only, the grant will not be hurt by it. But if the mistake or omission be in the substance of the name, the grant may be void by it. And therefore if Decanus & capitulum ecclesie cathed. sancte & individ Trin. Caerlil. grants by the name of Decanus ecclesie cathed. sancte Trin. in Caerlil. & totum capitulum ecclesie predict. This is good: et sic de similibus: for if the sense still remains either expressly or by necessary implication, and the description be such as imports a sufficient and certain demonstration of the true name of the corporation according to the foundation thereof, it suffices. But if any of the substance or essence of the name be omitted contra. And therefore if a corporation, incorporated by the name of Prepositi, &c. collegii regalis coll. beate Marie de Eaton, juxta Windsor, grant by the name of Per & sociorum colleg. regalis coll. de Eaton, &c. leaving out collegium & beate Marie; this grant is void. 6 Co. 65. 10 Co. 122, 124. 11 Co. 19. Dyer 110.

A grant to a knight by the name of esquire is void. Ld. Raym. 303.

A grant to a man by a wrong name may be good, si constat de persona, but the demonstratio personae must appear upon the face of the grant. Ld. Raym. 304.

For more concerning naming the grantor, see Vol. 1 fol. 160. 165.

(G) Who may be a Grantee. See 2 Burr. Rep. 731.

AS to a grantee three things are requisite:

1. That the grantee be a person capable, i. e. that he be a person in being at the time of the grant, made, and not disabled by any legal impediment to take by the grant.

2. That if the grant be by deed, the grantee be sufficiently named, or at the least set forth and distinguished by some circumstantial matter, and that he be so named or described as that he may be capable to take by the name or description.

3. That he himself and not a stranger, takes by the same grant.

All natural, politick or corporate bodies that are not disabled by law, may be grantees; and all persons that may be grantors may be grantees; and some others that cannot grant or give, yet may take or receive. And a grant made to one, two three or twenty such persons, is good. Co. Lit. 2, 3. Perk. § 42.

Bodies natural and politick.

A grant of land, or rent in possession to the right heirs of J. S. J. S. being then living, is void; for there neither is nor can be any such person in rerum natura, for no man can be an heir to another that is living: but such a grant to one in remainder is good, if so be that J. S. dies before the particular estate ends, and before the remainder happens. So if a grant be to him or her that shall be the first child of J. S. and he has no child at the time of the grant, this is void: so if a grant be made to the wife or child of J. S. when there is none such, it is void: as if a grant be to J. S. and to his first-born son, or to J. S. and her that shall be his wife, and he has at the time of the grant neither wife nor son; in these cases the grant is void as to the wife and son, and J. S. shall have all by the grant. Co. 101. 2 Co. 31. Perk. § 52, 54.

An alien. An alien may be a grantee, but if any thing be granted to him whereof he is incapable; as an estate of lands in fee-simple for life or years, he cannot hold it, but the king will have it from him.

Persons attaint. A person attainted of treason or felony before or after attainder may be a grantee, but he cannot hold the thing granted; for if the king or lord will, he may have it from him. So also persons outlawed in personal actions may be grantees of lands or goods, but the king will have the profits of the lands and property of the goods. Co. Lit. 2. Perk. § 48.

Outlawed. Feme covert. A woman covert may be a grantee, but her husband may by his disagreement avoid the grant; and yet if he does not avoid it in his life-time, the grant will be good: and he that will have the grant to be void, must shew the husband did disagree to it. Perk. § 43. Co. Lit. 2.

Infant. An infant may be a grantee, for this is presumed to be his advantage; and yet at his full age he may agree to it and perfect it, or disagree to it, and avoid it without any cause shewed. Perk. § 4. Co. Lit. 2.

Men de non sane memorie. A man de non sane memorie may be a grantee as well as any other may, and it seems these grants cannot be afterwards avoided. But such men cannot be grantees of offices of trust and such like things. Co. Lit. 2.

Bastard, persons deformed, &c. A bastard, persons deformed, having human shapes, lepers, and such like, may be grantees of lands or goods, &c. as other men may be. Ibid.

Hermaphrodite. An hermaphrodite may be a grantee according to the most prevailing sex. Ibid.

Clerk convict villain. A clerk convict, and a man imprisoned, may be a grantee as well as another, and so also might a villain of the king, or of a common person; but he could not retain the thing granted, for the king or lord might have it from him if he would; neither could monks, friars, and such like persons, be grantees, for they were utterly disabled. Co. Lit. 3. Perk. § 48, 51.

For more as to this head, see Vol. 1. fol. 165. 170.

(H) Of naming the Grantee.

Regularly it is requisite that the grantee be named by his names of baptism and surname; and so it is most safe; and special heed must be taken to the name of baptism, for that a man cannot have two or more names of baptism, as he may of surnames. Co. Lit. 3.

And yet in some cases, though the name be mistaken the grant is good; as if a grant be to J. S. and Em his wife, and her name is Emelin, (Bro. Nofme 9.); or a grant is made to Alfrid Fitz-James, by the name of Etheldred Fitz-James, (Bro. Confirmation 30.); or a grant be to Robert earl of Pembroke, where his name is Henry; or to George bishop of Norwich, where his name is John, (6 Co. 65. 27 Ed. 3. 85.); or a grant be to a mayor and commonalty, or a dean and chapter, and mayor or dean is not named by his proper name, (Co. Lit. 3.); or a grant be to J. S. wife of W. S. where she is sole: all these and such like grants are good; for in this case the rule doth hold utile per inutile non vitiatur. (Dyer 119.) (a) And if one be baptized by one name, and after confirmed by another, yet a

(a) A conveyance was made to Randolph Evers knight, lord Evers, and in avoidance of this conveyance it was alledged, that at the time when it was made, he was not known or reputed by the name of knight, and that he was not then a knight, and whether this should make the conveyance void or not was the question: and it was agreed that the conveyance so made to Ralph Edwards knight, lord Evers, was a good conveyance, and that the plea in bar to avoid the same was not a good plea, because where a thing is granted to one by such a name that it cannot mean another person, this is good without any christian name expressed, and as the case was here, there was but one lord Evers, and therefore this was certain enough, for that the same did well constare de persona; and therefore the other addition here of knight (though false) notwithstanding, yet this falsity should not take away the description of the true person to whom the conveyance was made, but that he ought to have the same, being here sufficiently expressed by the name of lord Evers, and therefore it was held by the court unanimously that the conveyance was good and sufficient to carry the land unto lord Evers though he was then no knight. 1 Bulst. 21. 666. lord Evers v. Strickland.

grant to him by his first is good; and so also some think of a grant to him by his second name; sed quære of this. Also when a bastard has got a name by reputation, a grant may be made to him by that name, and it is good. Co. Lit. 3.

If a grant be made to W. at Stile, by the name of W. at Gappe; this is a good grant notwithstanding this mistake.

But where a grant intends to describe the person of the grantee by his proper name, and omits or mistakes his christian name or surname; in this case for the most part the grant is void, unless there be some special matter to help it, as in the case before. And yet if the grant does not intend to describe the grantee by his own name, but by some other matter, there it may be good by a certain description of the person, without either surname or name of baptism. And therefore a grant to the wife of J. S. primogenito filio, or the second son, or to the youngest son, or senioro puero, or omnibus filiis, or filiabus J. S. or omnibus liberis J. S. or omnibus exitibus J. S. or to the right heirs of J. S. or to the next of blood of J. S. In these cases grants made to these persons in these words are good, for the person is certainly enough described. And if a lease be made to J. S. for life, the remainder to him that shall come first to Paul's such a day, or to him that J. S. shall name in three days; if in these cases any one comes to Paul's that day, or be named by J. S. within three days, and the particular estate so long continues, this is a good grant of the remainder. Id certum est quod certum reddi potest. But if a grant be made in these words, viz. To four of the parishioners of Dale; or Deo & ecclesia de D. or to two of the sons of J. S. and he has many sons; or to J. S. or W. S. in the disjunctive: these and such like grants as these are utterly void for uncertainty. And if a gift or grant of goods be to the parishioners of Dale in these words, it seems this is good: but if a grant or gift of land be made to them by these words, it seems this is void. And also it is of a grant of goods to the churchwardens of the parish; this is held to be good; but otherwise it is of a grant of lands to them. A bastard is capable by that name whereby he is usually called, and therefore a grant to him by that name is good. And a right heir, or one that shall be the first issue of J. S. that has no child, is capable of remainder by that name, but of land in possession he is not capable by that name. And a bastard, as the reputed son of J. S. may take by a grant to J. S. and his issue. A bishop may take by the name of a bishop without any other name; but if a grant made to the parishioners or inhabitants of Dale, or probris hominibus de Dale, or to the commoners of such a waste, or to the lord and his tenants bond and free; these are not good grants, for although these persons are capable, yet they are not capable by these names. 9 Ed. 4. 43. Fitz. Grant 23. Co. Lit. 3. Perk. §. 52. 54, 55, 56. Bro. Grant. 65. Done 17. 31. Dyer 337.

If there be two grantees, and one of them takes by the deed, it is sufficient; but if the grant be to one that is no party to the deed, and not to the grantee himself, in this case although the grantee and he to whom the grant is made be capable, and never so well described by their names, yet is the grant void; for no grant can be made but to him that is party to the deed, except it be by way of remainder: and therefore if a man makes a lease for term of life, and after the lessor grants to a stranger, that the tenant for life shall have the land to him and his heirs; this grant is void. Et sic de similibus. And yet it seems in some cases, that if one of the grantees be party to the deed, that another grantee that is no party to the deed may take with him; and therefore the case was, Robert gave the reversion of lands which Agnes his wife held for her life to Stephen de la Moore, habendum post mortem dictæ Agnetis in liberum maritagium cum Johanna filia ejusdem Roberti: in this case it was adjudged, that although Joan was not named before the habendum, yet that she should take in tail with her husband. Doff. & Stud. 94. Co. 15. Co. Lit. 21, 231. 5 Ed. 3. 17.

For more concerning naming the grantees, see Vol. 1 fol. 170.

(I) Of the Power of Grantees where the Grant is for the Benefit of others.

ON a grant made to the warden and assistants of S. for the benefit of the inhabitants, for the ease of taxes and relief of the poor, it was decreed that they should not let or make any leases of the land without the consent of the major part of the inhabitants of the place it being for their benefit in general. Cban. Ca. 269, 270.

(K) Of the Things granted. (a)

AS to things granted observe these things:

First, that the thing whereof the grant is made be grantable, and that both in respect of the nature of the thing itself, and also of his estate that grants it; for in some cases although the thing for the quality of it be grantable, yet in respect of the estate and property that the owner has in it, it is not grantable.

Secondly, That if it be by deed, it be sufficiently distinguished and named.

Amongst things that are grantable, some are grantable de novo, and in their first creation, but not transmissible nor assignable afterwards.

And some are grantable at first in their original creation, and assignable over afterwards from man to man in infinitum.

All things that may be granted by fine, and whereof a fine may be levied, may be granted over from man to man.

All things that are before observed to be grantable by or without deed, are grantable over from man to man: and therefore all corporeal and immoveable things that lie in livery, as manors, messuages, cottages, lands, meadows, pastures, woods, and the like, are grantable in fee-simple for life or years at first, and assignable over again at the pleasure of the grantee.

Also trees and emblements are grantable. And a man may grant the vesture or herbage, i. e. the grass of his ground, and not the ground itself.

And a man that is seised in fee of a house, may give or sell the timber, stone, &c. of the house, and the donee or grantee may take after the death of the donor. Bro. Done 10.

In grant.
vices.

Also all incorporeal things that lie in grant, as rents, services, and the like, are grantable over in fee-simple, for life or years; and therefore rents or services reserved upon any estate, and rents granted out of land, are grantable over in infinitum. And if a man has a rent reserved on a particular estate, he may grant over parcel of it.

But a rent or service suspended cannot be granted. Neither can a man grant a rent issuing out of a rent. If a rent be granted to me, I may grant it over to a stranger before I be seised of it, and this grant is not void. But an annuity it seems is not grantable over after the first creation of it. And yet if an annuity be granted to J. S. and his assigns pro consilio, it seems this annuity is grantable over. Perk. § 91, 87, 101, 103. Bro. Grant 3, 3 H. 6. 20. 9 H. 6. 12. Fitz. Grant 145. Co. Lit. 144.

Advowsons,

Advowsons are grantable in fee-simple, for life or years from man to man in infinitum.

Also the presentation to a church before the church is void, is grantable: But when the church is void, that turn is not grantable, for then it is in the nature of a thing in action.

Also rectories and tithes, and portions of tithes and pensions, are grantable from man to man in infinitum. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 7. Perk. § 90.

Reversions
ders.

Reversions and remainders are grantable from man to man in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life or years.

And if I have a tenant for life of three houses, I may grant the reversion of two of them.

And if I have the reversion of three houses and four acres of land, I may grant the reversion of two houses and of two acres of land.

And if a tenant in tail be of an acre of land, the remainder to his right heirs, he may grant over his remainder by itself; and yet it is such a thing as the tenant in tail himself may bar by a common recovery.

But if a grant be of land to J. S. for years, the remainder to the right heirs of J. D. and J. D. is living; this remainder is not grantable so long as J. D. lives. Perk. § 73, 87, 88.

Common.

Common of pasture, of turbary, of fishing, or of estovers, are grantable in fee, for life or years from man to man in infinitum. Perk. § 103.

And yet if a common in gross and without number be granted to a man and his heirs, this is not grantable over to another man; but if common for a certain number of beasts be so granted, the law is otherwise; and that this is grantable over in case where the first grant is to the grantee only, and not the grantee and his assigns. Per two judges against one, H. 16 Jac. B. R.

(a) A thing in action, a cause of suit, right of entry, or a title for a condition broken, or such like, may not be given or granted to a stranger, but only to the tenant of the ground, or to him that hath the reversion or remainder. Lit. sec. 347. Co. Lit. 214. 270. b. 2 Cro. 179, 180. 1 Cro. 638, 639. Dr. and Stud. Lib. 1. cap. 8. fol. 17 a.

Offices are grantable at first; but the great judicial offices of the kingdom, as the offices of the lord keeper, chief justices or chief baron, or of any other of the justices and barons, and such like, are not grantable over to others, neither may they be executed by deputies. But the sheriff's office, although it be not grantable over, yet it may be executed by deputy.

Perk. § 101. The reversion of an office is not grantable by a subject as it is by the king, yet a subject may grant an office habendum after the death of the present officer; and this is good. Per lord keeper and two chief justices, M. 5 Car. in Chan. The inferior offices also that are offices of trust, especially if they concern the person of the grantor, howsoever they are grantable at first, yet they are not grantable over by the officer to any other, unless they be granted to them and their assigns; and of this sort are offices of steward, bailiff, receiver, sewer, chamberlain, carver, and the like; neither may these be executed by deputy but where the grant is so. Co. Lit. 233. Perk. § 101. (a)

An office is not grantable by parol, especially for life. Ld. Raym. 159.

Licences and authorities are grantable at first for the lives of the parties, or for years; but the grantees of them cannot assign them over. And therefore if power be given to me to make an award of livery of seisin, I may not grant over this power to another. And if licence be granted to me to walk in another man's garden, or to go through another man's ground, I may not give or grant this to another. 12 H. 7. 25. 13 H. 7. 13.

A bare possibility of an interest which is incertain, is not grantable; (b) and therefore if one has a term of years in land, and by his will devises it to J. S. for his life, and afterwards to me for the residue of the years; or devises it to J. S. if he lives so long as the term shall last, and if he dies before the term ends, the remainder to me: In these cases, so long as J. S. lives, I cannot grant over this possibility. So if a lease be made to me and my wife for life, the remainder to the survivor of us, I may not grant this remainder over to another man; but such a possibility being coupled with some present interest, is grantable over; and therefore if A. has four houses in execution upon a statute, and by course of time it will endure thirteen years, and after two of the houses are evicted by elegit for fifteen years; in this case he that has this execution upon the statute may assign over his interest in these two houses; for after the execution by the elegit is satisfied, A. shall have the two houses again until he be satisfied. The lord cannot grant the wardship of the heir if his tenant is living. 4 Co. 66. 5 Co. 24. 10 Co. 51. Dyer 244. Perk. § 90.

These things that are inseparably incident to others, are not grantable without the thing to which they are so incident and belonging; and therefore a court baron, which is evermore incident to a manor, is not grantable without the manor itself; common appendant to land is not grantable without the land itself to which it belongs; and common of estovers appendant to a house is not grantable without the house itself to which it belongs. 1 Ed. 4. 10. 5 H. 7. 7. Perk. § 104.

A rent-service, or other thing, whilst it is wholly in suspense, is not grantable; and therefore if the lord disseises the tenant, or the tenant enfeoffs the lord upon condition, the lord cannot grant over the seignior during this suspension. But if one has a rent in fee out of my land, and he purchases the same land for life or years: in this case the rent is grantable

(a) As to grants of offices by bishops, vide Sir John Trevelyan, v. Bishop of Winchester, 1 Burr. 219.

(b) There are two kinds of possibilities, the one a bare possibility, that which the heir has from the courtesy of his ancestor, and which is nothing more than a mere hope of succession. Such a possibility undoubtedly is not the object of disposition; for if the heir were to dispose of it during the life of the ancestor, though it afterwards devolved on him from his ancestor, such disposition would be void. The other, a possibility or contingency, coupled with an interest, like the cases put in the context and other instances of contingent executory interests which might be stated. These are now considered as descendible, releasable, assignable, and devisable in the same manner as vested interests: vide Jones and others, against Roe, lessee, of Perry, 3 Term Reports, 88; et vide Sir Marmaduke Wroth's case, Hob. 45. Tenant in tail of an advowson, and his son and heir joined in a grant of the next avoidance. Tenant in tail died; and it was adjudged, that the grant was utterly void against the son and heir that joined in the grant, because he had nothing in the advowson, neither in possession nor right, nor in actual possibility at the time of the grant. So where lands were devised to husband and wife for their lives, the remainder to the survivor of them for years, and the husband granted over this term of years and died; a question arose whether the wife or the grantee should have the term; and it was adjudged that the wife, and not the grantee, should have it: because there was nothing in the one or other to grant over, until there was a survivor. And the law would have been the same if the wife had died, after the grant, and the husband had survived, yet he should have the term against his own grant; as if a lease were made for life, the remainder for years to him, which should first come to PAUL's. Should A. grant this term, and after be the first to come to PAUL's, yet the grantee should not have the term, because it was not in A. by any means, neither in interest or otherwise, until he came to PAUL's. Popbam 5.

even whilst the estate of the land continues. So if the tenant makes a lease for years or life of the tenancy to the lord; in this case the lord may grant the seignior notwithstanding. And yet if the tenant makes a lease to another man for life, and the lord grants the seignior to his tenant for life in fee; in this case the grantee of the seignior cannot grant it over, because it was never in esse. 16 H. 7. 4. Co. Lit. 314. Bro. Grant 173. Perk § 83, 89.

Franchises. Franchises, as views of frankpledge, perquisites of courts leet, consue of pleas, fairs, markets, goods of felons, waifs, estrays, hundreds, ferries, or passages, warrens, and the like, are grantable over from man to man in fee, for life or years in infinitum.

Things in action. Things in action, and things of that nature, as causes of suit, rights and titles of entry, are not grantable over to strangers, but in special cases; and therefore if a man has disseised me of my land, or taken away my goods, I may not grant over this land or these goods until I have seisin of them again. Neither can I grant the suit which the law gives to me for my relief in these cases to another man. So if I make a feoffment to another man, on condition that if I do such a thing, I shall have the land again; in this case I may not before or after the time of performance of the condition grant over the condition to another. But all these things I may release to the parties themselves: for it is a maxim in law, that every right, title or interest in presenti or in futuro, by the joint act of all them that may claim any such right, title or interest, may be barred or extinguished. 5 Co. 24. 6 Co. 50. 10 Co. 48. Co. Lit. 214. Dyer 241. Perk. § 86, 87, 85. Bro. Done 27, 24, 48.

And in some cases a grantee of a reversion may take advantage of a condition annexed to an estate for life or years. If a man owes me money on an obligation, or the like, I cannot grant this debt to another: But I may grant a letter of attorney to another man to sue for it and receive it, or I may grant the writing itself to another, and he may cancel it, or give it to the obligor. Co. Lit. 232. Perk. § 86.

A presentation to a church after the church is become void, is not grantable; for it is in the nature of a thing in action. Dyer 283.

And if a man takes my goods from me, or from another man in whose hands they are; or I buy goods of another man, and suffer them in his possession, and a stranger takes them from him; in these cases I may give the goods to the trespassor, because the property of them is still in me. Perk. § 92. Fitz. Done 3. 7.

Personal things. Trusts and confidences, which are personal things, for the most part are not grantable over to others. And hence it is also that offices of trust and confidence are not grantable over but in some special cases where they are granted to a man and his assigns, or where they are granted to a man and his heirs. Perk. § 99. Plow. 379.

Intire things. Some things are so intire that they cannot be severed by grant; and therefore if a man holds three acres of land of me at twelve pence rent, and I grant the services of the third acre; this is void, and he shall have all or none, for I cannot sever the tenure. But if a man holds land of me by homage, fealty, escuage, and a certain rent; in this case I may grant the rent, and keep the seignior. Fitz. Grant 19, 79.

Chattels real and personal. All chattels real and personal regularly are grantable from man to man in infinitum, as leases for years, be they present or future, trees, (a) oxen, horses, plate, household-stuff, and the like. Also trees, grass, and corn growing and standing upon the ground, fruit upon the trees, wool upon the sheep's back, is grantable. Dyer 58, 305. Plow. 142, 147. Perk. § 90, 91.

If a man sells me ten loads of wood, in his wood to be taken by his assignment; or sells me three acres of wood towards the North side of the wood; by this grant in these words I have such an interest as is grantable over. 5 Co. 24.

If I make a lease by deed of a house to another, and therein it is agreed between us, that if the rent be not paid me by such a time, I shall enter into the house, and take and sell the goods there as my own to pay the rent; it seems this is a good grant of the goods, and that I may do according to the agreement.

And if one that holds land of me grants to me by deed indented, that I shall distrain for my service in all his land; this is a good grant. Fitz. Bar. 280.

Money. A man may give or grant money; as if I deliver money, on condition that if he assures me of such land he shall have it, otherwise that he shall deliver it to me again; in this case

(a) By the grant of the trees by a tenant in fee simple, they are absolutely passed away from the grantor and his heirs, and vested in the grantee, and go to the executors or administrators, being in understanding of law divided as chattels from the freehold: and the grantee has power incident and implied to the grant to sell them, when he will, without any special licence; but the grantee cannot thereby dig and make saw-pits in the ground, or square the timber there, without a special authority for that purpose. Hob. 173.

if he makes the assurance he shall have the money, if not, I may have an account for it.—

Such things as are fera natura; as conies, hares, deer, and such like, are not grantable Fera natura. at all. Bro. Done 34.

A parson of a church may grant his tithes for years, and yet they are not in him. Perk. Tithes. § 90.

A man may give or grant his deeds, i. e. the parchment, paper and wax to another at his pleasure, and the grantee may keep or cancel them; and therefore if a man has an obligation, he may give or grant it away, and so sever the debt and it. So tenant in fee-simple may give or grant away the deeds of his land, and the executor in the first case, and the heir in the last case, has no remedy. But a tenant in tail of land cannot give or grant any of the deeds belonging to the land intailed, no more than the land itself. *Co. Lit. 232. Trin. 38 Eliz. B. R. 25 H. 8. 5. 1 H. 7. If one being a parson gives to another all the wool he shall have for tithes the next year; this is a good grant. Fitz. Grant 40.

Guardianship.*

The statute 12 Car. 2. c. 24. is, that the father may by deed grant the guardianship of his children from time to time.

(L) Of the Estate, Property and Possession of the Grantor.

ANY estate that a man has in fee-simple, fee tail, for life or years, in any lands, &c. or any rent or profit apprender out of the same, is grantable from man to man in infinitum. And he that has any such estate of any lands, may charge it with any rent or profit to be taken out of it as long as the estate of the land does last; but an estate at will is not grantable over.

And if an estate be made to a man and his heirs without the word assigns, yet he may assign it at his pleasure, for assigns is included within heirs.

An interesse termini, i. e. a lease for years to commence in futuro, is grantable before the term begins, whether it be a lease of the land itself, or any rent or other profit out of it.— 22 Ed. 4. 37. Perk. § 91.

The interest or estate that a man has by extent is assignable from man to man at pleasure. 4 Co. 64.

The reversion upon an estate-tail is grantable; and yet the tenant in tail in possession, by the suffering of a common recovery, may bar him in reversion of any fruit of it. 6 Co. 75. Curson's case. Co. 40. Altonwood's case.

If an estate be made of land upon condition; as if A. makes a feoffment to B. on condition that if A. pays 20*l.* he shall have the land again: in this case A. and B. together may at any time before the performance of the condition join together and grant this land, or charge it with any rent, &c. and this will be good; for it is a maxim in law, fee-simple land may be charged one way or other. And in this case B. may grant over his estate alone, but it will be subject to the condition. And if B. grants a rent out of the land to a stranger, and after the condition is performed, and the feoffor enters; in this case he shall avoid the rent. But in this case A. cannot grant, for he has nothing but a possibility. Co. 147. 10 Co. 48, 49. Lit. chap. Confirmation.

If one infeoffs divers to the use of his son and heir upon condition, and before the time of performance of the condition the father and son join to grant or charge the land; this is a good grant or charge. Co. 14.

If the tenant in tail, and he that is next in remainder in fee join in the grant of a rent-charge in fee, and after the tenant in tail dies without issue; in this case this is a good grant and charge against him in remainder. And if A. bargains and sells land to B. by indenture, and before enrolment they join to grant a rent-charge to C. by deed; this is a good charge and grant, whether there be any enrolment or not. And so if a donor and donee in tail grant a rent-charge out of the land, and then the donee dies without issue; in this case the grant is good to bind the donor. Co. Lit. 45. 10 Co. 48, 49.

If land be granted to two men, and to the heirs of their two bodies begotten; in this case although they have several inheritances after their death, yet neither of them can grant away his estate after his life, for they are divided only in supposition of law. Co. Lit. 182.

One coparcener of a feignory may grant his part to a stranger. Perk. § 73. (a)

If two jointenants be of a plough land, and one of them grants to a stranger common of pasture for beasts without number to be taken in the same land; this is void. Perk. § 103.

If two jointenants be of a reversion, and one of them grants the whole; this is void for a moiety. If a man grants or charges that which is none of his, and that wherein he has no property, it being in the grantee or a stranger; the grant is void. And therefore if a man grants a rent-charge out of the manor of Dale, or grants a reversion of land, and in truth the grantor has nothing in the manor of Dale, or in the land; in this case the grant is void. And although the grantor afterwards purchases the manor, or the land, yet this will not make the grant good. But if the grant be by fine, or by indenture, there in some cases it shall be good by way of estoppel. And although the party recites that it is his own, yet this will not mend the case: And therefore if a man recites that he has a rent of 10*l.* a-year, and then grants 5*l.* a-year, parcel of it; in this case, if he has no such rent, the grant is void. Perk. § 80, 65. Dyer 10, 33.

A shepherd, bailiff or parker, cannot give or grant away the goods of his master without authority. And yet it seems the servant of a taverner or mercier may give or grant his master's wine or wares. And if a wife gives or grants the goods of her husband; this is a good grant or gift until the husband disagrees to it, and by his agreement it is made good for ever. Bro. Done 56, 4.

If a man has a lease for years of land, and makes a lease for life of it, or charges it for longer time than the lease for years does last; in this the grant is good for so long as the lease for years does last, and no longer. But if he makes a lease for life and gives livery of seisin, he forfeits his estate. Plow. 524, 525.

Regularly a man cannot grant or charge that which is not in his own possession, although he has a right to it: And therefore if a man be disseised of his land, and before he has entered into or recovered the land, he grants or gives the land, or his right to the land, to a stranger, or grants a rent-charge out of the land to a stranger; in these cases the grants are not good. And yet such grants by fine may be good by way of estoppel; and by a release also the right may be extinct. Co. Lit. 214. Perk. § 65, 86.

But if one that has a reversion upon an estate for life grants a rent issuing out of this land; the grant is good, and the charge shall fasten upon the land after the estate of the tenant for life is ended. And if a man grants common, or rent, notwithstanding that a stranger take the rent, or use the common at the time of the grant, yet this grant is good, for a man cannot be out of possession of these things but at his pleasure. Perk. § 92, 98. Co. Lit. 46.

And if a lease for years be made to me, I may grant away my estate before my entry; and if the lease be to begin at a day to come, I may assign over my interest before the day comes; for in this case the interest is in me from the time of making the lease. Hil. 18 Jac. B. R. per two justices.

Also I may give or sell my goods that I have not in possession; and therefore if a man takes my goods out of mine or another man's possession, I may afterwards give or grant these goods to him or another man; and this grant or gift is good. Perk. § 92, 93. Fitz. Done 3. Bro. Done 13. Dyer 30, 90. 4 Co. 62, 63.

A lessor cannot give or grant the trees growing on the ground of his lessee for life or years without the licence of the lessee, except they be first cut down by the lessee, or some other, for then he may. And if there be lessee for life, and the lessor give the trees growing on the ground, and after the lessee for life dies; in this case the donee cannot take them, because at the time of the gift a property of them was in the lessee. But if a tenant in fee-simple gives or grants the houses standing, or trees growing on the ground he has in possession; in this case the grantee or donee may take them after the death of the grantor, and that although they be not cut or taken down before his death. And yet if the tenant in tail gives or grants the trees growing upon his intailed land, and the donor dies before the trees be cut; in this case the donee or grantee cannot cut them afterwards. However if such a tenant in tail gives or grants his emblements of corn growing on the ground, the donee may cut and take them after the death of the tenant in tail. And if the tenant in tail gives or grants his trees, and dies before they be cut, and afterwards, before the issue in tail enters into the land, the donee or grantee cuts them and takes them away; in this case the issue in tail can bring no action of trespass against the donee or grantee for the trees. But perhaps if the trees be not removed off the ground, he may take them. Dyer 305. 20 H. 6. 22. Perk. § 59. 11 Co. 50.

(a) If two executors have a term, and one of them grants to a stranger all which belongs unto him, the entire term passes; for each has an entire authority and interest in the term as executor. Dyer. 23. b. pl. 146.

If two coparceners be of an advowson, and the one presents, and then he grants the next presentation; this is a good grant, but by this grant passes the next he has to grant, for his companion must have the next: so if one be seised in fee of an advowson, and he has a wife, and he grants the third presentation; this is a good grant, but it shall be taken for the third he may grant, which is the fourth, for the wife is to have the third for her dower. Dyer 35. 15 H. 7.

(M) The Words of a Grant. (a)

DEDI & concessi are the most apt words for all kinds of grants, yet it may be by other words, and the grant as good as by those words.

The best way in grants is to grant by words of present time in the present tense, as well as in the preterperfect tense.

But a grant by words of the preterperfect tense only, as by dedi & concessi only without words of the present tense, is good. 35 H. 6. 11.

The words give and grant in a deed of things which lie in grant, amount to a grant, a feoffment, a gift, a release, a confirmation or surrender at the election of the party, and may be pleaded as a grant, as a release, or a confirmation, at his election. Co. Lit. 301. b. 2 Saund. 96, 7.

(N) Of naming and describing the Thing granted; and therein of Election.

BY the grant of an acre of land, or of any other thing by the name whereby it is called, the reversion of that thing, if the grantor have no more than a reversion, that will pass. But it is not so converso. 4 Co. 122. Perk. § 114. 116. 10 Co. 106, 107. 11 Co. 47. Vaughan 83.

And yet some have said, if one grants a thing in possession by the name of the reversion of the thing, this is good to pass the possession. Quod non est lex. Plow. 190. For if one makes a lease for years, and before the lessee enters, the lessor grants the land by the name of the reversion of the land; this grant is void. If one makes a lease for life of the demesnes of a manor, rendering rent, and after he grants the manor by the name of the manor; this is a good grant for the reversion of the demesnes as well as for the residue of the manor. But if one grants common by the name of the reversion of the common, it seems this is not good. And yet if one has common, and grants it for life, and during that estate he grants the common by the name of totam illam communiam, &c. Some hold this grant to be good. Co. Lit. 46.

Any thing may be granted by the name whereby it is and has been usually called of latter times within nine or ten years, or thereabouts, although it be an improper name, and not the antient name of the thing, but a name newly gotten. And so a manor may pass by the name of a messuage or farm, or a farm or manor by the name of a messuage,

(a) The words of a grant are often not material if the intent be clear. As if one covenant and grant with another that it shall be lawful for him to take and carry away to his own use, such corn as shall be growing upon certain ground at the end of a term then existing therein; though the words are not by gift of the corn, yet they are equally good to transfer the property, because of the intent and common use, of such words. So a lease without impeachment of waste, for the like reason and not ex vi termini, gives the trees. Hob. 132.

if it be so usually called and reputed: so the great houses in London called Exeter and Dorset houses may be granted by those names. 6 Co. 65. 45 E. 3. 6. Bro. Grant. 7. Perk. § 116. Vaughan 71.

And if a man grants a pasture-ground by the name of a wood, or a wood by the name of a pasture-ground, and the things are called by those names; these are good grants of those things. And if one grants by the name of a great field, that which indeed is but a little close, but it is usually called by the name of a great field; this is a good grant of this thing. So if one grants by the name of a plough-land that which in truth is but an acre of land, or grants by the name of a manor that which is but a plough-land; these grants are good. And so it seems to be e converso. But if a man grants a house or a messuage; by this grant an acre of land will not pass. 14 H. 8. 1. 27 H. 8. 2. (a)

By the grant of services a rent reserved upon an estate-tail will pass. Co. Lit. 150.

If a man makes a lease of an house to another for years, and the lessee divides it and makes two houses of it, and after the lessor grants the reversion of it by the name of one house; this is a good grant to pass it. And if one leases three houses to three several men at several times, and they divide them into twenty-nine tenements and households in them all; and the first lessor grants them by the name of three messuages; this is a good grant to pass them all. But if he grants by the name of fifteen messuages or tenements only, this is good for no more but for fifteen of the subdivided tenements. Per Cur' B. R. M. 7 Jac.

If one recites that he has a rent-charge issuing out of Blackacre and Whiteacre, and then grants the same rent, and in truth it issues out of Blackacre only; or if he recites that it issues out of one acre when in truth it issues out of both; in both these cases the grant is good notwithstanding these mistakes. Perk. § 72.

If one be patron of the church of St. Peter and Paul in D. and he grants the next presentation of the church of St. Peter, or of the church of St. Paul; these are void grants to pass the presentation. Bro. Grant 12.

If one grants a rent out of Whiteacre [by the name of a rent out of Blackacre; this grant is void as to charge Whiteacre. Perk. § 79.

If one has a manor called Steeple Lavington, and he grants it by the name of West Lavington, alias Steeple Lavington, by the alias, especially if the grant says lying in Lavington, and the manor of Steeple Lavington lies in that parish, and the grantor hath no other land there, it may be good. Per C. J. Hutton and Yelverton, M. 3 Car. C. B. in Edward Crew's case. See 2 Leon. 205.

If one grants all his lands which he has in D. in this manner, all my lands in D. which I had of the grant of J. S. this is a good grant of all his lands in D. although he had them not of the grant of J. S. but of the grant of another: but if the words be, all my lands which I had by the grant of J. S. in D. in this case the grant is not good to carry any other lands in D. but such as he had of the grant of J. S. Agreed Mic. 2 Jac. in Brown's case.

So if one grants in this manner, all my manor of Sale in Dale which I had by descent; and in truth he had it not by descent but by purchase; this is a good grant of the manor. So if one grants all his lands in Dale, and says no more; this is a good grant to pass all his lands there. But if one grants in this manner, all my lands in Dale which I had by descent from my father; (b) and in truth he had them not by descent but by purchase; this grant is void, and will not pass those lands. Plowd. 169, 395. So was the opinion of C. J. Popham, 2 Jac. B. R.

So if I grant in this manner, all my lands that I had by the attainder of J. S. and in truth I had no land by that means; this grant is void. Dyer 87.

And if I grant after this manner, all my lands in B. in the tenure of D. which I had of the gift of J. S. and in truth it lies in B. and is in the tenure of D. but it was not purchased of J. S. this is a good grant to pass the land. Adjudged Mic. 2 Jac. Brown's case.

If a parish lies in two counties, viz. Berks and Wilts, and one grants in this manner, all his close called Callis in the parish of Hurst in the county of Berks; and in truth the close lies in the county of Wilts; this is a good grant to pass the close. But if one grants in this manner, all his houses in the parish of St. Buttolph's extra Aldgate, late in tenure of R. where in truth he has no houses there, but he has some houses in St. Buttolph's extra Aldersgate; this is a void grant. And yet if the grant be in this manner, all that my house in the occupation of J. S. in St. Andrew's parish; whereas in truth it is in the parish of K. but in the occupation of J. S. this grant is good to pass the house. But if it be thus, all that my house in St. Andrew's parish in Holborn, in the occupation of J. S. and in truth it is in another parish, but in his occupation; this grant is not good to pass the house. Dyer 299. 3 Co. 10.

(a) A lease for years will not pass by a grant of omnia terras et tenementa sua in Dale; because lands and tenements import freehold at least; but contra if one grant omnes firmas suas, for thereby a lease for years will pass. Bro. Grant. 155.

(b) Contra if it were "which he had by descent from his son" for there the grantee shall have all his lands in Dale; because the further description is impossible. Plowd. Comm. 170.

A. by deed granted his hundred and manor of Odybam in Hampshire, and his manor of Working in Surrey, and all his manors, lands and premises in Odybam and Working aforesaid; whereupon the question was, whether the grantor's manor of Hartlerow, which was within the hundred of Odybam, but not within the manor of Odybam or Working, should pass by this deed. And per lord chancellor King—An hundred is only a franchise consisting of a court called the hundred court, and probably has the return of writs, and by such grant the franchise passes, but not all the grantor's lands; wherefore by the word (hundred) the manor of Hartlerow not being named in the grant, does not pass. 2 Williams, 399, 400.

If one grants in this manner, my manor of Dale which appeareth by office found to be of the value of 10 l. per ann. and in truth in the office it is found at 20 l. per ann. this grant is good notwithstanding this misprision. Per Tanfield, Hil. 2 Jac. B. R.

If one grants in this manner, all my manor of W. late parcel of the possession of the abbot of S. and late in the possession of K. and in truth it was never in the possession of K. this grant is good notwithstanding. But if the grant be thus, omnia illa terras, &c. in tenura J. S. jacen' in W. nuper prioratui de S. spectan'; and in truth the land lies in S. and not in W. this is no good grant to pass the lands in S. And if the lands do lie in W. but are in the tenure of J. D. and not in the tenure of J. S. the grant is void to pass the lands in the occupation of J. S. Pasch. 7 Jac. B. R. 2 Co. 32, 33. (a)

If one purchases lands of J. S. in T. and has no other land there, and he grants his land in T. late the land of R. S. or late the land of S. and mistakes or omits the christian name; this grant is good notwithstanding this mistake. And so also it is where there is a blank left for the christian name. And if in this case he grants all his land in T. and says no more; this is a good grant to pass the land. And if one grants all his lands in D. called N. which were the lands of J. S. this is a good grant to pass the lands called N. though they were never the lands of J. S. But if the grant be of all his lands in D. which were the lands of J. S. by this none but those lands that were the lands of J. S. will pass. Dyer 376. Bro. Grant 92.

If one grants in this manner, all my meadow in D. containing ten acres; whereas in truth his meadow there contains twenty acres; this is a good grant for the whole twenty acres. So if one grants thus, all those forty-seven acres of land by the sleight, whereof fifteen lie in D. twenty in E. and twenty-five in F. and in truth all of them lie in F. and none of them in D. or E. this is a good grant to carry the whole forty-seven acres. Dyer 80.

If one grants twenty loads of wood, and says in this grant, for which twenty loads of wood he had sixteen loads by the grant of his father J. S. and in truth J. S. did not grant any wood to him at all, or did not grant unto him sixteen loads only; this is a good grant of the twenty loads of wood notwithstanding this false recital. Bro. Grant 69.

If one grants his manor of D. and does not say in what town or towns it lies; this is a good grant. But it is best to say in what towns the manor does lie; but if it lies in divers places (as it may) and any of the places into which it goes be omitted, and the rest are set down, no part of the manor lying in the town that is not expressed will pass. Bro. Grant 53. 7 H. 4. 14. (b)

If one grants a manor, and that which is but one manor, by the name of the manor of A. and B. this is a good grant of the manor. And so also it is if it be two manors; as if a man be seised of the manors of Ryton and Conder in the county of Salop, and he grants in this manner, totum illud manerium de Ryton & Conder cum pertinen. in com. Salopia; this is a good grant of both the manors; otherwise it is in case of the king. Co. 46.

If one has a farm of land, meadow, &c. by lease called Hodges, lying within the parishes of St. Stephen and St. Peter in St. Albans; and he reciting the said lease, grants to C. his term and interest in the house, lands, &c. called Hodges in the parish of St. Peter in St. Albans; this grant is good only for so much as lies in the parish of St. Peter, and not for that which lies in St. Stephen's. But if he grants the farm, and does not say in what parish it lies; this is a good grant of the whole farm; as in the case before of a manor that lies in divers parishes. And if in the case here the farm lies within the parish of St. Peter only, the grant is good for the whole farm. If one recites, that whereas he hath such lands by forfeiture, or whereas such a one has an estate of his land, or whereas the grantee hath paid him 10 l. or done him such service, or the like, and these things are not true, and afterwards he grants the land by apt words; this mistake in these cases will not hurt the grant. But otherwise it is in case of the king in some of these cases. Per Cur. C. B. int. Plat and Sleep, Pas. 9 Jac. Bro. Grant 53.

(a) The principle upon which cases of this nature depend, seems to be this; if a thing be once well and fully named with certainty, although other circumstances annexed be mistaken, as the town in which a house is situated, or the tenant in whose occupation it is, or whose possession it is, yet the grant shall be good. But if the thing, granted be only described by the circumstances attending it, so that it is only to be known by the generality of the description, there, if any of the particulars fail, the grant will be void.

(b) If one grant the site of a manor, with all his lands to the said manor appurtenant, hereby all the demesne lands pass; but if it were with all the land appertaining to the site, nothing passes but the manor place. Owen 51.

If one has a manor in which he has parks and fish-ponds, and he grants the manor for life, except the game and fish, and after grants the reversion of the manor; this is a good grant of the game and fish also. 11 Co. 50. (a)

If a grant be of centum libratas terræ, or 50 libratas terræ, or of centum solidat. terræ; these are good grants, and hereby passes land of that value, and so of more or less. Co. Lit. 5.

If a grant be of an acre of land covered with water, it is good. Co. Lit. 4.

If a grant be of a certain portion of land or tithes, or of the fourth part of land or tithes, and there be a sufficient certainty in the description of it; this grant is good. And therefore if the grant be of the fourth part of the tithes and of the offerings of the church of St. Peter; this is a good grant. Dyer 84. 34 Ed. 3.

If one seised of an advowson in fee, grants to J. S. that as often as the church is void he shall name the clerk to the grantor, and he shall present him to the ordinary; this is a good grant of the advowson. Bro. Grant 101, 121.

A reversion may be granted by the name of a remainder, or a remainder by the name of a reversion, and such a grant is good; as if one grants lands to J. S. the reversion to J. D. this is a good grant of the remainder. Dyer 46. Plow. in Hill and Grange's case.

If one makes a lease of land to husband and wife for their lives, and after grants the reversion of this by the name of the reversion of the land which the wife holds for life; this grant is void. So if one grants to two for life, and after grants the reversion of one of them; this is void. Fitz. Grant 03.

A fulling or grist mill may be granted by the name of a mill only. 21 Aff. pl. 23.

Incertainly.

If one grants in this manner, all that his messuage, &c. and all the lands, meadows and pastures thereunto belonging; this is a good grant, and certain enough to pass all the lands, meadows and pastures, usually occupied therewith. 27 H. 6. 2. Plow. 164. Bro. Lease 55.

If the lord grants his manor by the name of his manor with a reversion of all his tenants, or by the name of the reversion of all his tenants bond and free which hold for life or years, and does not name them by their particular names; these grants are good in these cases, and certain enough. Fitz. Grant 68. Perk. § 68.

Place.

If one grants land, and says not in what parish, county or village it lies; yet if there be any other matter to describe it, it seems the grant is good enough, and it may be averred where it lies. But if there be no circumstantial matter in the grant to denote and decypher out where it lies, the grant is void for incertainly. And therefore if one grants his manor of Dale, or his lands in the occupation of J. S. or his lands that descended to J. S. or his lands that belonged to the priory of S. or the like; these are good grants, and certain enough. Id certum est quod certum reddi potest. Bro. Grant 53. 9 Co. 47.

If there be a tenant for life of three houses and four acres of land, and he in reversion grant the reversion of two houses and of two acres of this land; this is a good grant, and has sufficient certainty in it. Perk. § 73.

If a grant be incertain altogether, and has not sufficient certainty in it, and cannot be made certain by some matter ex post facto, it is void. And therefore if there be lord and tenant of three acres of land by fealty, and 12 d. rent, and the lord grants the services of a third acre to a stranger; this grant is merely void. Perk § 67.

So if husband and wife hold an acre of land jointly of J. S. for their lives, and J. S. grants the reversion of the acre of land which the husband alone holds for life; this grant is void. So if there be lord and three jointenants, and the lord grants the services of one of them to a stranger; this grant is void. Perk. § 68, 69.

So if one has twenty tenants that pay him 12 d. a-piece rent, and he grants 5 s. yearly out of these rents, and does not say of which tenant; this grant is void for incertainly. 9 H. 6. 12.

(a) A man prescribes to have common appurtenant to the manor of B. for all his beasts levant and couchant upon it, and grants this common to A. And the question was, whether this grant was good or not? And it was adjudged that he could not grant it over, for he had it quasi sub modo, to wit, for the beasts levant, &c. But common appurtenant for beasts may be granted over, Drury v. Kent. 2 Car. 15. pl. 19.

So if conuſance of pleas be granted, and it is not ſaid before whom; this is utterly void. So if one has two tenements, and grants the reuerſion of one of them, and does not ſay which; this is void for incertainty. 44 Ed. 3. 17. Bro. Grant 52.

So if one grants ſtowers to another, and ſays not what nor how; this is void. So if one grants me ſo many of his trees, or of his horſes, as may be reaſonably ſpared; this grant is void. And yet if one grants me ſo many of his trees as J. S. ſhall think fit; it ſeems this grant is good. Dyer 91.

And if one grants me one hundred loads of wood to be taken by the aſſignment of the grantor, or to be taken by the aſſignment of J. S. theſe are good grants. So if one grants me three acres of wood towards the North ſide of the wood; this is a good grant, and certain enough. 5 Co. 24.

If one grants to one of the children of J. S. and J. S. has more than one, and he does not deſcribe which he intends; this grant is void for incertainty. Bro. Done 311.

If one grants to me a rent or a robe, twenty ſhillings or forty ſhillings, or common of paſture or rent, in the diſjunctive, which is at firſt very uncertain; yet this grant may become good; for if I make my election, or be paid the rent, or perform the grant in either part; the grant is now become good. 9 Ed. 4. 36. Perk. § 74.

So if one be ſeiſed of two acres of land, and he leaſes them for life, the remainder of one of them, and does not ſay of which, to J. S. in this caſe if J. S. makes his election which Election. acre he will have, the grant of the remainder to him will be good. So it is when a man has fix horſes in his ſtable, and he grants to me one of his horſes, but does not ſay which of them; in this caſe I may chuſe which I will have; and in theſe caſes when I have made my election, and not before, the grant is good. And if in theſe caſes the grantee does not make his election during his life, the grant will never be good. Perk. § 76.

If one be ſeiſed of land, and leaſes it for years, rendering 10 s. rent, and after he grants a rent of 10 s. out of this land to a ſtranger; in this caſe although there be ſome incertainty in the grant, yet this is a good grant of a rent of 10 s. but it ſhall be taken as a grant of a new, and not of the old rent, and therefore ſhall not take effect until the particular eſtate be ended. Bro. Grant 77.

(O) Of the Commencement and Limitation of the Eſtate granted.

IN ſome caſes, although there be in a grant a good grantor and a good grantee, and a thing granted, and all theſe are duly and certainly deſcribed, yet the grant may be void for ſome fault in ſome other thing touching the grant; as,

First, In the Commencement of the Eſtate granted.

For if a man be poſſeſſed of a term of years, although it be an hundred years or upwards, and grants to another all the reſidue of his term of years that ſhall be to come at the time of his death; this grant is void for incertainty, (a) And yet if a man poſſeſſed of ſuch a term in land, grants the land to another, to have and to hold to him after the death of the grantor for fifty years, or for two hundred years; theſe are good grants; and in the firſt caſe the grantee ſhall have fifty years, if there be ſo many to come of the term of one hundred years at the death of the grantor; and in the laſt caſe the grantee ſhall have the land for the whole one hundred years, or ſo many of them as are to come at the death of the grantor. Bro. Grant. 154. Co. 155. Plow. 520.

So if one grants any thing that lies in livery or in grant, and that is in eſſe at the time of the grant in fee-ſimple, fee-tail or for life, and the eſtate is to begin at a day to come; this for the moſt part is void. However in moſt caſes the livery of ſeiſin will help it. But a leaſe for years to begin in futuro is good enough. Dyer 58. 5 Co. 1.

And if a leaſe be made to one for years, or for years determinable upon lives; and after a leaſe is made to another of the ſame thing, to have and to hold from the end of the former leaſe; this is a good leaſe, and the commencement certain enough. So if a leaſe be made of land to one for life, and after the reuerſion thereof is granted to another for life, cum poſt mortem vel alio modo vacare contigerit; this is good. Paſ. 7 Jac. Dennis's caſe.

So if a leaſe be made to one for twenty years, if he lives ſo long, and after a leaſe is made to another, habendum after the end of the term granted to the leſſee for twenty years, to be accounted from the date of the deed last made; this is a good grant for twenty years after the first lease ended, and the words, to be accounted, &c. shall be rejected. 7 Jac. C. D. Craddock's case.

And if one grants a rent to me, habendum from the time of my full age for my life, and I am at full age at the time of the grant; this grant is good for my life.

If a feme sole has a lease for years, and takes a husband, and then he in reversion grants the land to another, habendum after the term granted to the husband, &c. where in truth it was never granted to the husband but by an act of law, viz. the marriage; yet this is a good lease. Plow. 192. 6 Co. 36.

Secondly, In the Limitation of the Estate, or in the Habendum of the Grant.

If a grant be to two & heredibus, without uis; this is void for uncertainty; and yet a grant to one & heredibus, is good. 22 H. 6. 15. Plow. 28.

And if a man grants two acres, to have and to hold, the one in fee-simple, the other in fee-tail, or the one in fee-simple, and the other for life, and does not set down which in fee-simple, &c. in certain; yet this grant is good, and the grantee has the election. And yet if one grants two acres to two men, habendum the one to the one and the other to the other, and says not which either of them shall have; this is void for uncertainty. Perk. § 75, 77. Plow. 152.

And if one has a reversion of land after a lease for years, and grants the land, habendum the reversion, or grants the reversion, habendum the land; this is good. 10 Co. 107. Plow. 147.

(P) What may or may not be granted by the same Deed.

IF one grants his reversion of land to one, and by the same deed grants a rent out of the same land to another, and delivers the deed to both of them at one time; this is good, and shall enure first as a grant of the rent to one, and then as a grant of the reversion to the other. Plow. 540.

If one conveys land to another, and the grantee by the same deed doth grant a rent or common to the grantor out of the same land conveyed; this is as good as if it were by another deed. Dyer 6.

(Q) Of several Grants of the same Thing.

IF a man has granted a thing once, he cannot afterwards grant it again; and therefore if a man gives or grants me a horse, first by word of mouth, and after grants him to me by deed; this second grant is void; and therefore if there be any fault in this grant in writing, it is not material. And if a man grants to me common of pasture without number in his ground, and after makes the like grant to another; this second grant is void as to me, although it be good against the grantor. And if one grants the next presentation (a) a church after the death of the present incumbent, and after grants the same to another; or makes a lease of land to one for ten years, and after makes a lease of the same land to another for the same ten years; or gives a horse to one, and after gives the same horse to another; in all these cases the second grant is void. But if the first grant or gift be only of part of the thing granted afterwards, or a part of the time only, the second grant will be good for the overplus. And therefore if one be seised of a manor, and demises ten acres of the demesne for ten years, and after demises the whole manor to another for twenty years; this is a good grant for the overplus of the manor besides the ten acres presently, and for the whole manor for the last ten years. So if the second grant be to begin after the first is determined, it is good. And if the second be such as may

(a) But if a man seised of an advowson in fee, take a wife, now by act in law the wife is intitled to a third presentation, if the husband dies before her; and yet, if the husband grants the third presentation to another, and dies, the heir shall present twice, the wife shall have the third presentation, and the grantee the fourth; for in this case, it shall be taken the third presentation which he might lawfully grant; and so note a diversity between a title by act of law, and by act of the party, for the act of law will work no prejudice to the grantee; but in case of the act of the party, the grantee shall not have the second avoidance by construction to have the next avoidance which the grantor might lawfully grant; for the grant of the next avoidance does not import the second presentation. Presentments al Eglise. be satisfied and not impeach the former, both shall stand good. And therefore if one that has an advowson grants the next presentation to one, and after he grants the next presentation to another, and does not say after the death of the incumbent; in this case the second grant is good, and the grantee thereby shall have the second avoidance after the death of the present incumbent. Dyer 35, 350. Perk. § 102. Lit. § 298.

(R) Of Omissions of Ceremonies, &c. required in Grants.

IN some cases, although there be no fault in the grant, yet it may become void for want of some other matter that ought to be done, as inrolment, livery of seisin, attornment, &c. for where any of these things is requisite, the grant is not good until it be had, neither for that thing which will not pass without that ceremony, nor yet for that which otherwise would pass by the deed. And therefore if a feoffment be made of a manor to which an advowson is appendant, and no livery is made, so that the manor does not pass, the advowson will not pass neither. 21 H. 7. 5.

(S) What shall be said a good Grant in the Nature of a Release or Discharge, or not.

IF one makes a feoffment with warranty, and after the feoffee grants to the feoffor, that neither he nor his heirs shall vouch the warrantor or his heirs upon the warranty; this is a good discharge of the benefit of voucher, and bars the feoffee of it; and yet he may bring a warrantia chartæ still. So if one grants to me a rent-charge, and afterwards I grant to him that he shall not be sued for the rent; this is a good grant to bar me of bringing an annuity for the rent; and yet I may distrain for the rent still: And so e converso, if I grant to the grantor, he shall not be distrained for the rent; by this I am barred of a distress, but not of bringing an annuity for the rent. So if the lord grants to his tenant holding by knight's service, that his heirs shall not be in ward, &c. or a man grants to his debtor that he will not sue him for the debt at all, or until such a time; or one grants to his lessee for life or years, that he shall not be impeached for waste; all these are good discharges, and may be pleaded by way of bar to avoid circuitry of action. 7 H. 6. 14. 21 H. 7. 23. Perk. § 69. Bro. Grant 175. Kelw. 88.

(T) Of void Grants.

IN some cases a grant or gift may be void, at least to some persons and purposes, when there are none of the defects aforesaid in it: as when it is made upon a corrupt contract, or to the end to defraud creditors of their debts, or purchasers of their lands bought, or the like.

(U) How Grants shall be construed.

EVERY grant and covenant shall be taken most strongly against him who makes it, because he is presumed to receive a valuable consideration for what he parts with.—2 Roll. Abr. 56.

And if it cannot take effect as to the parties, it shall take effect as it may, rather than the deed or grant shall be void. T. Raym. 142. Or by another way than what the parties designed. Lucas 35.

And if the words have a double signification, this shall extend to the disadvantage of him who speaks them, and shall be construed most to the advantage of the other. T. Raym. 142.

Grants must be construed in this manner:

First, They must be beneficial to the taker.

Secondly, They are never void where the words may be applied to some intent.

Thirdly, The words must be construed according to the intent of the parties, and not otherwise. Plow. 160. b.

The law will never make any construction against the purport of a grant to the prejudice of any, or against the meaning of the parties. Co. Lit. 313. a.

Where the grant is impossible to have effect according to the letter, there the law makes such a construction as the grant by possibility may take effect. Co. Lit. 103. b.

F.* without any let, disturbance or contradiction of the said J. F. and in as large and ample manner as if the said M. were then a feme sole and unmarried: And lastly, the said J. F. for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, and every of them, doth by these presents covenant, promise and grant to and with the said *R. Of Leases.

(A) A Lease what, and Lessor and Lessee who.

A Lease (from laisser, dimittere, to part with) is a demise or letting of lands, rent, common, or any hereditament, to another for a lesser time than he who lets it has in it, (for when a lessee for life or years grants over all his estate or time to another, this is more properly called an assignment than a lease) and is most commonly and aptly made by the words demise, grant and let, although it may be made and done by other words.

He who lets is called the lessor, and he to whom it is let the lessee.

The word lease is also sometimes (altho' improperly applied to the estate, i. e. the title, time or interest the lessee has to the thing demised, and then it is rather referred to the thing taken or had, and the interest of the taker therein: but in this place it is applied rather to the manner or means of attaining or coming to the thing letten.

(B) Kinds of Leases.

A Lease in this sense is sometimes made and done by record, as a fine, recovery, &c. and sometimes and most frequently by writing called a lease by indenture, although it may be made by deed poll.

And sometimes it is by parol, without any writing, as by the common law it might be of land or such like thing grantable without deed for life, and never so many years. But now now by the stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. All estates, interests of freehold, or term of years, or any uncertain interest in or out of lands, &c. not put in writing, and signed by the parties making them, or their agents, authorized by writing, shall have no greater effect than as leases at will; except leases not exceeding three years, whereof the rent reserved shall be two thirds of the full value of the thing demised. And no such estates or interests (not being copyhold or customary interests) shall be assigned, granted or surrendered, unless it be either by deed or in note writing, signed as before, or by act and operation of law.

A lease may be made either,

1. For life (i. e. for the life of the lessee, or another, or both) or,
2. For years (i. e. for a certain number of years, as ten, a hundred, a thousand or ten thousand years) months, weeks or days, as the lessor and lessee agree; and then the estate is properly called a term of years; for the word term not only signifies the limits and limitation of time, but also the estate and interest that passes for that time: some of these leases also for years commence in presenti, and some in futuro, at a day to come; and the lease that is to begin in futuro is called an interesse termini, or future interest. Or,
3. At will, when a lease is made of land to be held at the will and pleasure of the lessor, or at the will and pleasure of the lessor and lessee together; and such a lease may be made by word of mouth as well as the former.

And there is a common way of conveying by mutual leases, or by lease on each side, which is called a conveyance by demise and re-demise, and is proper upon the grant of a rent-charge.

(C) Things necessarily required in every good Lease.

Regularly these things must concur to the making of every good lease:

1. There must be a lessor, (as in other grants) and he must be a person able, and not restrained to make a lease.
2. There must be a lessee, and he must be capable of the thing demised, and not disabled to receive it.
3. There must be a thing demised, and such a thing as is demisable.
4. If the thing demisable be not grantable without a deed, or the party demising not able to grant without a deed, the lease must be made by deed; and if so, then there must be a sufficient description and setting forth of the person of the lessor, lessee, and the thing leased, and all necessary circumstances, as sealing, delivery &c. required in other grants must be observed.
5. If it be a lease for years, it must have a certain commencement, at least when it comes to take effect in interest or possession, and a certain determination either by an express enumeration of years, or by reference to a certainty that is expressed, or by reducing it to a certainty upon some contingent precedent by matter ex post facto, and then the contingent must happen before the death of the lessor or lessee.
6. There must be all needful ceremonies, as livery of seisin, attornment, and the like, in cases where they are requisite.
7. There must be an acceptance of the thing demised, and the estate by the lessee. But whether any rent be reserved upon a lease for life, years, or at will, or not, is not material, except only in the cases of leases made by tenant in tail, husband and wife, and ecclesiastical persons; of which see hereafter.

(D) What is a good Lease for Life or Years with respect to the Lessor and Lessee, the Thing leased, and the Estate, Property or Possession of the Lessor, &c. therein.

Leases for life, years, or at will, may be made of any thing corporeal or incorporeal, that lies in livery or grant. Also leases for years may be made of any goods or chattels. Bro. Leases 23.

A man seised of an estate in fee-simple in his own right of any lands or tenements, may by deed or writing in the country, (or before the stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. might without writing by word of mouth) make a lease of it for what lives or years he will or would. And he that is seised of an estate in tail of any lands or tenements, may make any lease out of it for his own life, but no longer, unless it be by fine or recovery, or it be such a lease as is warranted by the statute of 32 H. 8. And he who is seised of lands or tenements of any estate for his own or another's life, may make what lease for years he will of it, and it will

will be good as long as the lease for life does last. And he who is possessed of lands or tenements for years, may make a lease of it for all or part of the years, and these are good leases. The tenants for life or years may also assign over all their estates if they please. And if such tenants make leases for longer time, as if lessee for years make a lease for life; by this the land will pass for life, if the term of years last so long. But if he gives livery of seisin upon it, (as he must to make the lease for life good) this is a forfeiture of the estate for years. Co. 44. 7 Co. 12. Plow. 524.

Infant.

If an infant be seised of land in fee-simple, and he makes a lease for years of it, rendering no rent; this lease is void. But if there be a rent reserved upon the lease, then the lease is but voidable, and may by the acceptance of the rent by the infant after his full age be made good. 9 H. 7. 24. 18 Ed. 4. 2. Plow. 545.

Jointenants, tenants in
parceners.

Jointenants, tenants in common and parceners, may make leases for life or years of their own parts and purparties at their pleasure; and these leases will bind their companions. And one coparcener or tenant in common may make a lease of his part to his companion, if he will. Lit. chap. Tenant in Common. F. N. B. 62. G.

If a feoffment be made upon condition, and before the time of performance of the condition the feoffor and feoffee join to make a lease for life or years of the land; this is a good lease.

Baron and feme.

A man that has an estate in land to him and his wife and his heirs, may make what lease he will of the land, and this will be good against all men but his wife only, and that for her time. Bro. Leases 58.

Lessor in fee
Disseisee.

If there be lessor in fee, and lessee for ten years; in this case they two may join together, and make a lease for lives, or for any term of years; and this is good. 10 Co. 49.

A disseisee cannot make a lease of that land whereof he is disseised, until he makes his entry, or recovers the possession of the land again. Plow. 133.

So neither can a woman that has recovered the third part of her husband's lands, in a writ of dower, make any lease of it before she be in possession by execution. Bro. Sci. Fa. 36.

And yet if a lease be made to me for years, I may make a lease of part, or an assignment of all the term, before I have made my entry into the land demised. Ca. Lit. 46.

So if the father dies, and the son makes a lease to a stranger of the land descended to him before his entry, this is a good lease: but if a stranger had entered, and abated into the lands, and then the son had made the lease, contra. Plow. 137, 142.

By special

In some cases such persons as are not seised in fee-simple, &c. not able to derive such estates for life or years out of their own estates, may lawfully notwithstanding make such leases for life, &c. and this is sometimes by a special act of parliament enabling them so to do. And hence it is also, that a tenant in tail may make leases for three lives, or twenty-one years. And sometimes it is by a special power or authority given or reserved by and to the party himself that had the fee-simple in him, or given to some other to do it in his name; and leases thus made may be good. And therefore if an act of parliament enable a tenant in tail, or a tenant for life, to make leases for three lives, or twenty-one years, leases that are so made in pursuit of that authority are good. And if a man be seised of land in fee, and conveys it to the use of himself for life, or in tail, with divers remainders over, with a proviso, that it shall be lawful for him, or any such tenant in tail, to make leases for twenty-one years; in this case he or they may make such leases, and they will be good. But in both these cases care must be had to pursue the authority strictly, that the leases made be according to the power and direction given by the statute or proviso; (a) for if it differs and varies ever so little from the sense and meaning of the same, the lease will not be good. And therefore in the case before of a power to make leases for twenty-one years, if the party makes more leases for twenty-one years at one time than one, they are all void, except the first, because it is against the intent of the parties, though it be not against the words. And so if the power be to make leases for three lives, he cannot make a lease for ninety-nine years, if three lives so long live. But if the power be thus: provided, &c. that he may make any lease in possession or reversion, so as it does not exceed the number of three lives or twenty-one years; in this case a lease may be made for ninety-nine years, if three lives live so long. But where uses are raised by way of covenant, and in the deed there is a proviso, that the covenant for divers good considerations may make leases for years; this power is void, and no lease can be made hereupon; neither will any averment help in this case. And if a man has a letter of attorney, or other authority, to make leases for another, and makes them accordingly; such leases are good. 5 Co. 5. Dyer 357.

6 Co. 2, 8, 70. 1 Co. 75. (a)

But herein observe three things:

First, that the authority be good.

Secondly, that he who is deputy or attorney pursues the authority strictly.

Thirdly, that he does it in the name of his master, and not in his own name. 9 Co. 76.

A lease made by an attorney in his own name and the covenants to pay the rent are void.

2 Ld. Raym. 1419. Stra. 705. S. P.

Livery not necessary in a lease made by virtue of a power. Ld. Raym. 99.

A lease for a greater number of years than the lessor had power to grant, shall be good in equity for so many years as he had power therein: so that where a person hath power to lease for ten years, and he leaseth for twenty years, the lease shall be good for ten years of the twenty. 3 Chan. Rep. 11. Chan. Ca. 23.

A lease for years mortgaged and near expiring was renewed by the mortgagor's executors; it was decreed that the new lease, allowing the charges, should be assigned to the plaintiff, and made subject to the payment of the mortgage money and interest. Finch's Rep. 393, 394.

If a lease for years be limited in trust for heirs-male, &c. the limitation is void in law, and the term shall go to the executors or administrators: but an assignment of a lease, with limitations in tail, remainder over in trust; though it be void in law, it has been held good in equity by the intent. Chan. Rep. 16. 2 Chan. Rep. 58.

The heir shall have a lease assigned to attend the inheritance, and not the executor: and a lease waiting on the inheritance, where it is not affets in law, is not affets in equity. 2 Chan. Ca. 156, 49.

Leases devised by will are affets to pay the testator's debts, notwithstanding the assent of the executors to the devise of them. Chan. Ca. 257.

The question was, whether the inheritance of the land being gone and made void, the lease which was to attend it should go according to uses declared by covenant to stand seised. Decreed in this case, that it being a settlement on marriage, and so on a consideration, it should go to the wife for so many years as she lived. Chan. Ca. 47.

A. seised in fee of an estate, demised to B. his executors, &c. for ninety-nine years in trust for himself and his wife, for their lives, and the life of the survivor, and after the death of the survivor, in trust for the heirs of their two bodies; and in default of such issue, in trust for the heirs of the body of A. And in default of such issue, in trust for the heirs of the survivor of husband and wife. A. his wife had issue a son, A. dies, and afterwards the son dies without issue; the wife administered to her husband and son, and assigns the term to C. The question was, who was intitled to the trust of this term, whether it was attendant on the reversion, and so belonged to the plaintiff as the heir at law of A. who was intitled to the reversion in fee expectant on this term, or to the defendant C. as assignee of the wife? The master of the rolls decreed the title to belong to the assignee of the wife, and that this term should not be attendant on the inheritance; for that the party who raised the term, and had power to sever it from the inheritance, shewed his intention so to do by limiting the trust of the survivor of him and his wife, and the heirs of the survivor, which, though it was a void limitation, yet sufficed to shew his intent to sever such term from the reversion. (E) What Leases (or other Acts) may be made (or done) by a Tenant in Tail, and what Leases made by such a Tenant shall be good to bind the Issue or him in Remainder, or others after the Death of the Tenant in Tail; and how they shall bind.

ANY person whatsoever of full age that has any estate of inheritance in fee-tail, in his own right, of any lands, tenements or hereditaments, may at this day without fine or recovery make leases of such lands for lives or years, and such leases shall be good, so as these conditions and incidents following be therein observed and kept. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. Co. Lit. 44.

First, Such leases must be by deed indented, and not by deed poll or by parol.

Secondly, They must be made to begin from the day of the making thereof; or from the making thereof. Co. Litt. 44. a. b.

Thirdly, If there be an old lease in being of the land, the same must be surrendered or expired, and ended within a year of the time of the making the new lease; and this surrender must be absolute and not conditional; also it must be real, and not illusory or in shew only; for factum non dicitur quod non perseverat. 5 Co. 2. Co. Litt. 44. a. b.

Fourthly, There must not be a double or concurrent lease in being at one time; as if a lease for years be made according to the statute, he in reversion cannot afterwards expulse the lessee, and make a lease for life or lives, nor another lease for years according to the statute, nor e converso. 5 Co. 2. But if a lease for years be made to one, and afterwards a lease for life is made to another, and a letter of attorney is made to give livery of seisin upon the lease for life, and before the livery made the first lease is surrendered, in this case the second lease is good. Trin. 4 Jac. B. R. Co. Litt. 44. a. b.

Fifthly, These leases must not exceed three lives or twenty-one years from the time of the making of them; and therefore if a tenant in tail makes a lease for twenty-two or forty years, or for four lives, this lease is void; and that not only for the overplus of time more than three lives or twenty-one years, but for that time of three lives or twenty-one years also. And it has been resolved, that if a tenant in tail lease for ninety-nine years determinable upon three lives, this is not a good lease. But if a lease be made by a tenant in tail for a lesser time, as for two lives, or for twenty years; this is a good lease. And if a lease be made for four lives, and it happens that one of the lives dies before the tenant in tail dies, yet this accident will not make the lease good, but it remains voidable notwithstanding: 5 Co. 6. Dyer 246. Co. Litt. 44. a. b.

Sixthly, These leases must be of lands, tenements or hereditaments manurable or corporeal, which are necessary to be letten, and whereout a rent by law may be issuing and reserved. 5 Co. 2. And therefore if a tenant in tail makes a lease of such a thing as lies in grant, as an advowson, fair, market, franchise, or the like, out of which a rent cannot be reserved, especially if it be a lease for life; this lease is void, and that although the thing have been antiently and accustomably letten; and a grant of a rent-charge therefore out of such lands is void. Tallentine's case, Pas. 3 Jac. B. R. 11 Co. 60. Co. Litt. 44. a. b.

And if tenant in tail makes a lease for three lives of a portion of tithes, rendering rent, this lease is unquestionably void. And so also it seems it is if it be a lease for twenty-one years. Trin. 2 Jac. B. R. adjudged. Dodding's case.

(a) Vide On this subject, Pugh and the Duke of Leeds, Cowper 714. in which it was laid down, that "from" may mean either "inclusive or exclusive," and shall be taken in that sense which will make the deed effectual.

Seventhly, They must be of such lands or tenements which have been most commonly letten to farm, or occupied by the farmers thereof by the space of twenty years next before the lease made, so as if it had been letten for eleven years at one or several times within twenty years before the new lease made, it is sufficient. And although the letting have been by copy of court-roll only, yet such a letting in fee, for life or years, is a sufficient letting; and so also is a letting at will by the common law. But these lettings to farm must be made by such as are seised of an estate of inheritance; for if it has been only by guardian in chivalry, tenant by the curtesy, in dower, or the like; this will not serve to be a letting within the intent of the statute. 6 Co. 37. Dyer 271. Co. Litt. 44. a. b.

Eighthly, There must be reserved upon such leases yearly, during the same leases, due and payable to the lessor and his heirs, to whom the reversion shall appertain, so much yearly farm or rent, or more, as has been most accustomably yielded or paid for the lands, &c. within twenty years next before such lease made; and therefore if the rent be reserved but for part of the time of the new lease, this lease is void. And if the tenant in tail has twenty acres of land that has been accustomably letten, and he makes a lease of these twenty acres, and of one acre more which has not been accustomably letten, reserving the usual yearly rent, and so much more as to exceed the value of the other acre; this is not a good lease by the statute. So if there be tenant in tail of two farms, the one at twenty pounds rent, the other at ten pounds rent, and he makes a lease of both these farms together at thirty pounds rent; this is not a good lease within the statute. 5 Co. 8. 6 Co. 6. 37, 38. Co. Litt. 44. a. b.

But if besides the annual rent there have been formerly reserved things not annual, as heriots, fines or other profits upon the death of the farmers, or profits out of another's soil, as pasturage for a colt, &c. if upon the new lease the yearly rent be reserved, although these collateral observations be omitted, yet the leases are good. Trin. 3 Jac. B. R. adjudged. Trin. 18 Jac. B. R. ibid.

And so also if there be more rent reserved upon the new lease than the rent that has been antiently paid, the lease is good notwithstanding; and yet if tenant in tail of land lets a part of it that has been accustomably letten, and reserves the rent pro rata, or more than after the rate; this is not a good lease. 5 Co. 6. 44 Co. Litt. a. b.

And yet if two coparceners of twenty acres of land of equal value between them in tail, and these have been usually letten, and they make partition of these lands, so as each of them has ten acres; in this case they may make leases of their several parts, reserving the half of the accustomable rent. 5 Co. 5. And yet Co. Litt. 44. b. is contra.

And if upon the old lease the rent was payable at four days in the year, and by the new lease it is reserved to be paid at one day; this is a good lease. So if the rent upon the old lease be payable in gold, and the new rent be payable in silver; the lease is not good. And if a tenant in tail be of a manor that has been usually demised for ten pounds rent; and after a tenancy escheat, and then he makes a lease of the manor, rendring 10*l*. rent by the year, this is a good lease; but if the lessor purchases a tenancy, then it seems otherwise. Trin. 3 Jac. B. R. Cornwallis's case, 5 Co. 5, 6. Co. Litt. 44. a. b.

Ninthly, Such leases must not be without impeachment of waste; and therefore if tenant in tail makes a lease of his land intailed without impeachment of waste; this lease is void. And if a lease be made for life, the remainder for life, &c. this is not a good lease; for in this case during the remainders the tenant for life cannot be punished for waste done. But if such a tenant of land makes a lease of it to J. S. for the lives of three others; this is a good lease, although it may afterwards become an occupancy. 6 Co. 37. and Meer's case adjudged. Co. Litt. 44. a. b.

Tenthly, Such leases must not be against any special act of parliament, and therefore if a woman that is tenant in tail of the gift of her deceased husband, or any of his ancestors, whilst she is sole, or after with another husband, makes any such lease warranted by this statute; yet this lease is not good. Stat. 11 H. 7. 20. 3 Co. 51.

Eleventhly, They must have all due ceremonies and circumstances for the perfection of them, as other such like leases; as livery of seisin, and the like, where they are needful. And then only when leases have these conditions, and are made according to these provisions, are they said to be within the statute of 32 H. 8. and such only as do bind the tenant in tail himself, and issue in tail; for otherwise, if it be not warranted by this statute, although it will bind the tenant in tail himself that made it, yet it will not bind his issue, but as to him it will be void or voidable at the least; for if tenant in tail of land makes a lease of it for a hundred years without any rent reserved thereupon; this lease as to the issue in tail is void: but if he makes a lease of his land for 100 years, rendring rent, and has issue, and dies; in this case the lease is only voidable by the issue at his pleasure; and therefore if the issue accepts the rent after the death of the tenant in tail, by this means the lease is affirmed.

affirmed and become good. But howsoever the lease be made, it will not bind him that comes in of a remainder over, nor him that is the donor; and therefore if a tenant in tail makes a lease warranted by the statute, and after dies without issue, so that the land remains over to another, or reverts to the donor; in these cases neither he in the remainder, nor the donor, shall be bound by this lease; for as to them the lease is void. And yet by a common recovery the tenant in tail may make leases of or lay charges upon the land to bind the donor and him in remainder also. But otherwise it is of a fine; for if tenant in tail makes a lease for years by fine, this will not bar the donor, nor the remainder in any case where it is in a stranger. And yet if the remainder be in the tenant in tail himself, and he makes a lease for years by deed according to the statute, or by fine; this lease is good, and shall bind his own remainder. 7 Co. 7. 8 Co. 54. Dyer 7, 8. Woman's Lawyer 73. Plow. 435, 436.

(F) What Leases (or other Acts) may be made (or done) by the Husband with the Lands he has in Fee-simple or Fee-tail in the Right of his Wife, or jointly with her; and what Leases made by him of such Lands are good, or not, and how.

THE husband may at this day without fine or recovery make leases of the land, tenements or hereditaments, whereof he has any estate of inheritance in fee-simple or fee-tail in the right of his wife, or jointly with his wife, made before or after the coverture; so as there be in such leases observed the eleven conditions or limitations before required in the leases made by tenant in tail, and so that the wife do join in the same deed, and be made party thereunto, and so seal and deliver the same deed herself in person. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. Co. Lit. 44.

For if a man and his wife make a letter of attorney to another to deliver the lease upon the land, this lease is not a good lease from the wife warranted by the statute. And yet then, as in other like cases of leases not warranted by this statute, it is a good lease against the husband. And when the lease is such a lease as is warranted by the statute, it binds the husband and wife both, and the heirs of the wife; but if it be an estate-tail, it does not bind the donor, nor him in remainder. Pas. 7 Jac. B. R.

If the husband and wife at the common law had joined in a lease of her land without rendering of rent; this lease had been void as against the wife; and so is the law still. 26 H. 8. 2.

If the husband at the common law had been seised of land in the right of his wife, and he had made a lease for years rendering rent, and died; this lease had been void, and so is the law still. 26 H. 8. 2. 2 Co. 77.

If the husband and wife at the common law had made a lease by word, rendering rent; this lease had been void as against the wife; and so is the law still. Dyer 91.

The husband and wife together may by fine or recovery make what leases they will of her land, or charge it for what time they will; and such leases and charges will be good against the husband and wife both, and their heirs also. But if the husband alone levies any fine of his wife's land, and thereby makes any estate whatsoever; this will not bind the wife after the husband's death, but she may avoid it. And if the husband and wife make a lease of her land, rendering rent to them and the heirs of the wife (as in such leases it ought to be); in this case the husband cannot by fine or otherwise grant or discharge this rent longer than during coverture, unless the wife join in the fine, but the rent shall descend, remain or revert in such sort and manner as the land should have done. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. Vide Woman's Lawyer 163.

If a woman seised of an estate for life, with a power to make a lease for three lives or twenty-one years, marries, and she and her husband join in making the lease, and both die before the lease is expired; here, though the husband in right of his wife, and she in her own right, are possessed of an estate for life, and therefore can, as owners, make a lease, and there appears no intention of the parties, (imagining perhaps they should have out-lived the lease) that this lease should be made by virtue of the power; yet because the lease, supposing it made by them as owners, cannot have all the effect the parties intended, for some it would have, (it would be a good lease during the lives of the husband and wife) yet because it cannot have all, it shall be esteemed made by virtue of the power. Lucas, 10 Mod. 36.

(G) What Leases (or other Acts) Bishops, or other Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Persons and Colleges may make (or do) with the Lands they have in the Right of their Churches or Houses, &c. and what Leases made by such Persons will bind their Successors and others, or not.

BISHOPS, with the confirmation of the dean and chapter, parsons or vicars, with the consent of their patrons and ordinaries, archdeacons, prebends, and such as are in the nature of prebends, as precentors, chaunters, treasurers, chancellors, and such like; also masters and governors, and fellows of any colleges or houses, (by what name soever called) deans and chapters, masters or guardians of any hospital, and their brethren, or any other body politic, spiritual and ecclesiastical, (Concurrentibus his quæ in jure requiruntur) might by the antient common law have made leases for lives or years, or any other estates of their spiritual or ecclesiastical livings for any time without stint or limitation. Co. Lit. 44. 5 Co. 14. 11 Co. 66. See Burr. Rep. 221.

And at this day the bishops, and the rest of the said spiritual persons, except parsons and vicars, may make leases of their spiritual livings for three lives or twenty-one years, and such leases will be good both against themselves and their successors. But such persons may not make leases or estates for any longer time than for three lives or twenty-one years; and if they do, although it be by fine or recovery, or it be confirmed by the dean and chapter, &c. yet it is void against the successor. Neither will the leases made by such persons for three lives or twenty-one years be good, unless they have certain conditions and properties required in them. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. 13 Eliz. c. 10. 1 Jac. c. 3. 1 Eliz. c. 19. 14 Eliz. c. 11. 18 Eliz. c. 10. 20.

These things therefore are necessarily required to be observed in the making of such leases:

First, That they have the effect of all the qualities or properties before mentioned and required by the statute of 32 H. 8. in the lease made by the tenant in tail, and be made after that manner, viz. that they be by deed indented.

Secondly, That they begin from the time of the making of them.

Thirdly and Fourthly, That the old lease be surrendered, and there be not a concurrent lease (save in the case of a bishop); and therefore if any such person makes a lease for twenty-one years to one, and then makes a lease for three lives to another; this second lease is void. And yet if a bishop makes a lease for twenty-one years to one man, and then within a year after makes another lease to another for twenty-one years, to begin from the making of it; this, if it be confirmed by dean and chapter, is a good lease.

Fifthly, That they do not exceed three lives or twenty-one years, but they may be for a less time.

Sixthly, That they be of lands or tenements manurable or corporeal.

Seventhly, That they be made of lands that have been commonly let to farm by the space of twenty years before.

Eighthly, That there be reserved upon them the antient and accustomed rent payable to the lessor or his successors during the time.

Ninthly, That they be not made without impeachment of waste.

Tenthly, That there be livery of seisin upon them, &c. where it is requisite. Co. Lit. 44. 11 Co. 66. 5 Co. 3. 15.

Eleventhly, If the lease be made according to the exception of the statute of 1 Eliz. and 13 Eliz. and not warranted by the statute of 32 H. 8. as in the case of a concurrent lease, and it be made by a bishop or any sole corporation, it must be confirmed by the deans and chapters, or others that have interest. And if a parson or vicar make a lease, it is not good but during the parson or vicar's residence, according to the statute of 13 Eliz. c. 20. and in this case there needs no confirmation at all. 11 Co. 66. 5 Co. 3.

Twelfthly, Some of the leases that are made by the colleges and houses of the university, &c. must have some rent-corn reserved upon them. Stat. 18 Eliz. c. 20.

But bishops, deans, parsons, and such like spiritual persons, cannot grant the next advowsons of churches, neither can they grant rents out of their spiritual livings, but the same charges will be void after their death. And if a bishop suffers an annuity to be recovered against him by a pretence of title of prescription on a judgment after a verdict or confession, or a parson in such a case prays in aid of the patron, and so suffers an annuity to be recovered; this will not bind the successor. And yet a bishop, or any such spiritual person may grant antient offices of trust of necessity or conveniency, as the offices of chancellor, register, bailiff, or the like, with the antient fees incident thereunto, for the life or lives of the grantees: and such grants are good although they be made by the bishops of the new erected bishopricks, and that there be not in them the conditions and properties required in the leases before mentioned, so as they be confirmed by the dean and chapter. But they may not grant any new office, nor yet add any new fee to the old offices; and therefore if a bishop grants any annuity pro consilio impenso & impendendo, where none was before; this will not bind the successor. And yet if there be an old fee, and there is a new fee added to it; in this case it seems it is good for the old fee, although it be void for the new fee. Neither may they grant their offices otherwise than they have been granted: and therefore where the antient grant of the office has been to one, it cannot be now granted to two; and where the antient grants have been to two jointly, they may not be now granted in remainder one after another. Neither may the grants of these offices be longer than for the life or lives of the grantees. And in case where the grant is void, the confirmation of the dean and chapter will not make it good. 5 Co. 15. 11 Co. 66. 10 Co. 58. Dyer 370. And most of these points were agreed by justice Jones and justice Whistock, at Lent assizes at Gloucester, 6 Car.

But here observe, that although in all these cases of leases and grants not warranted by the statutes aforesaid, the statutes say the leases shall be void; yet this is to be understood as against the successors, and not against the lessors themselves; for the leases are good so long as the lessors live, or at least so long as they continue in the place: and therefore if such a lease be made by a dean and chapter, or other corporation aggregate; it is good as against the dean or others, head of the corporations, so long as he continues in his place. And if a bishop makes any lease or other grant not warranted by the statute of 1 Eliz. or a dean and chapter, master and fellows of a college, or the like, make leases not warranted by the statute of 13 Eliz. c. 10. these leases are good against themselves, although they are void against their successors. So as if a private act of parliament entails land upon a man, and appoints him what estates he shall make, and that if he makes any other estates they shall be void; in this case they shall not be void as to the tenant in tail himself that makes them. Co. Lit. 45. 329. 3 Co. 59. 10 Co. 59. 11 Co. 73, 78. 5 Co. 5.

Leases of benefices with cure are no longer good than the parson is resident. Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 20.

Leases made by colleges must have reserved upon them the third part of the rent in corn. See the statute of 18 Eliz. c. 20.

A college was seised in fee of lands in right of the college, and the statutes relating to the constitution of it restrain from making leases of the lands, other than for twenty-one years at the rack rent. The college made a lease to J. S. for twenty-one years at the rack rent; the lessee improved the premises; and at the college audit an entry was made in the register, by which, in consideration that J. S. had built two houses, and thereby had improved the premises, therefore it was recommended, that at the end of the lease the college should make him a new lease for twenty-one years, at the antient rent, without raising it; and this entry was signed by the master, warden, and most of the fellows: afterwards, upon J. S.'s applying for a new lease, the college, at the audit held about half a year before the expiration of the old lease, made an order, that J. S. should have a new lease at the old rent, and under the same covenants as the former; and this order was signed by the master, warden, and most of the fellows: J. S. died intestate about the time of the next audit, which was three weeks before the lease expired; whereupon the widow, as administrator, applied at the audit following after for a new lease, but being refused brought her bill for that purpose. And lord chancellor said, the master-warden betrayed his trust in relation to the college, and had acted inconsistently with the oath he had taken; that he did not like the recommendation made by the master, warden and fellows, to make a new lease to the intestate at the old rent, it being no less than a recommendation to their successors to wrong the college, and break their statutes, which say, that no lease should be made but at rack rents; and as to the signing of the master, warden and fellows, that could not be such a contract as bound the college; for a contract to bind that must be under its common seal; wherefore the bill was dismissed with costs. Will. 655.

(H) Of the Manner of the Agreement in a Lease, and the Words whereby the same is set down; and what Words will make an Estate for Life or Years.

A Lease made for a thousand days, months or weeks, is as good for so long as it endureth, as a lease for an hundred or a thousand years. So a lease for half a year, or a whole year, is good. 6 Co. 72. 14 H. 8. 13.

So if a lease be made from day to day, or from week to week, for four years; this is a good lease for four years. Et sic de similibus. Plow. 422.

So if one makes a lease for ten years, and so from ten years to ten years, during an hundred years, or until an hundred years incurred; this is a good lease for an hundred years. Plow. 272. Bro. Leases 49.

So if one makes a lease for three years to three years during the life of J. S. in this case if livery of seisin be not given, this is a good lease for six years; but if livery be given it is a good lease for the life of J. S. And if a lease be made from my death until Anno Domini 1650, this is a good lease. Dyer 24.

If I say to J. S. being in my house, here J. S. I demise to you my house and land so long as I live; this is a good lease for life to him if livery of seisin be made. 6 Co. 26. Livery of seisin.

If one makes me a lease of land until a hundred pounds be paid me, and makes livery of seisin upon it; this is a good lease for life determinable upon the payment of the hundred pounds. But if no livery be made, it is no good lease. 21 Aff.

If one makes a lease to me for my life, and for four, ten or twenty years after; this is a good lease for life; first if livery of seisin be made, and then a good lease for years, for so many years as are agreed upon afterwards, which my executors shall have. And if no livery of seisin be made, yet it seems it is a good lease for so many years after my death. Bro. Leases 27, 51. Executors.

If an indenture of lease be made between A. of the one part, and B. C. and D. of the other part, and therein A. demises land to B. to have and to hold to him for eighty years, if B. shall live so long, and if he dies or aliens the premises within the term, then that his estate shall cease; and then the lessor grants the land to C. for so many years of the said term as shall be then to come after the death or alienation of B. if he lives so long: this is a good lease to B. for so many years as he shall live of the eighty years, but the lease to C. after is not good, for the term is ended by the death of B. But if the words of the second demise be, to have and to hold during the residue of the eighty years, and not during the residue of the term; the second demise is good to C. also. 1 Co. 153. Dyer 253.

If one makes me a lease for sixty years if I live so long, provided that if I die within the term, that my executors shall have it during the residue of the sixty years, in this case this is a good lease for the sixty years determinable upon my death, but not a good lease for the residue of the sixty years after my death: and yet it may amount to a good covenant for that time. 1 Co. 145. Dyer 150, 253.

A lease for years cannot by the agreement of the parties be made to the heirs of the lessee, nor intailed to the heirs of his body; and therefore if a lease be made to J. S. and his heirs, or to J. S. and the heirs male of his body, yet the executors of J. S. and not his heirs, shall have it; and the executors may sell the term. 2 Co. 24. 10 Co. 87.

If A. covenants to levy a fine to B. and his heirs, provided that if he pays B. and his heirs 10 l. at the end of thirteen years, that then the fine shall be to the use of A. and his heirs: and A. covenants with B. by the same deed, that B. his heirs, executors and assigns, shall quietly hold the premises from Michaelmas next for thirteen years, and yearly from thenceforth for ever, if the 10 l. be not paid according to the intent; this covenant does not make a good lease for the thirteen years, and it is but a covenant. Evan's case, Trin. 5 Jac. B. R. Covenant.

If one makes a lease for a certain number of years, and it is further agreed that upon some contingent the lessee shall have the fee-simple, and livery of seisin is given thereupon; the lease for years continues good for the time agreed upon. Plow. 272.

If two agree by word that one of them shall have such a piece of land for twenty years; this is a good and perfect lease that is made by this agreement, although they agree to have a writing made of it afterwards; for the writing is but the confirmation of it. But if the agreement be, that such a writing shall be made, or that a lease shall be made of such a thing between them, and put in writing, so that the agreement hath reference to the writing, and implieth an intent not to perfect the agreement till the writing be made; in this case the lease is not a perfect lease until the writing be made. Rex Justice Jones at Gloucester affizes.

Although the most usual and proper making of a lease is by the words demise, grant, and to farm let, and with an habendum for life or years; yet a lease may be made by other words; for whatsoever words will amount to a grant, will amount to a lease; and therefore a lease may be made by the words give, betake, or the like. The word locavit also is a good word. And the use in the exchequer is to make leases by the word commitimus, which is a good word to make a lease. Co. Lit. 2. F. N. B. 270. E. Bro. Leases 71. Words.

And if A. does but grant and covenant with B. that B. shall enjoy such a piece of land for twenty years; this is a good lease for twenty years. Bro. Leases 60.

So if A. promises to B. to suffer him to enjoy such a piece of land for twenty years; this is a good lease for twenty years. Per Cur' B. R. Mich. 9 Jac.

So if A. licenses B. to enjoy such a piece of land for twenty years; this is a good lease for twenty years: and therefore it is the common course, if a man makes a feoffment in fee, or other estate, upon condition that if such a thing be or be done at such a time, that the feoffor, &c. shall re-enter, to the end that the feoffor, &c. may have the land and continue in possession until that time, to make a covenant that he shall hold and take the profits of the land until that time: and this covenant will make a good lease for that time, if the uncertainty of the time (whereunto care must be had) do not make it void. And therefore if A. bargains and sells his land to B. on condition to re-enter if he pays him 100 l. and B. covenants with A. that he will not take the profits until default of payment, or that A. shall take the profits until default of payment; notwithstanding this may be a good covenant, yet it was no good lease. And if the mortgagee covenants with the mortgagor, that he will not take the profits of the land until the day of payment of the money; in this case although the time be certain, yet this is no good lease, but a covenant only: and if one gives a bond for the quiet holding of one close for three years; it seems this is no lease in law. Agreed by all the judges, Mic. 20 Jac. & per Justice Bridgman 8 Car. B. R.

See the opinion of the parliament for bonds and covenants both, stat. 14 Eliz. c. 11.

(I) Of two Leases at one Time of the same Thing.

IF a lease be made for life or years to A. and after the lessor makes a lease for years to B. regularly this concurrent lease to B. is a good lease at least for so many years of the second lease, as shall be to come after the first lease is determined according to the agreement; as if the first lease to A. be for twenty years, and the second lease to B. be for thirty years, and both begin at one time; in this case the second lease is good for the last ten years. And yet the reversion at the common law would not pass without the attornment of the tenant; and therefore if any rent was reserved on the first lease, the second lessee shall not have it until the first lessee attorned, (but now such attornment is useless.) But if the second lease be for the same or for a lesser time; as if the first lease be for twenty years, and the second lease be for twenty or ten years, to begin at the same time; these second leases are for the most part void. Plow. 433, 421, 273, 521. Co. 155. 4 Co. 58. Bro. Leases 72, 10. Vid. Shep. Prac. Con. 112, 113.

And yet herein a difference is taken between leases made by matter of record and by writing, and leases that are made by word of mouth; for if the second lease be made by fine, deed indented, or poll, although it be but for the same or for a lesser time, and although it be a lease of the land itself, and not of the reversion, yet it will pass the rent reserved upon the first lease, if the first lessee attorns, and so also it will do without attornment where attornment is not needful. But if the second lease be made by word of mouth, it is otherwise, for a reversion and a rent in this case will not pass without deed; and therefore a grant by word does not pass them. And if the second lease be by fine or deed indented, then also it will work by way of estoppel, both against the lessor and against the lessee; so that if the first lease happens by any means, as by surrender or otherwise, to determine before it be run out, then the second lessee shall have it; and if there be any rent reserved upon the second lease, the lessee must pay it from the time of making the lease. Dyer 58, 356. Plow. 421, 422. Co. 155.

And therefore if one makes a lease of land to A. for ten years, and after makes a lease to B. of the same land from Michaelmas next for ten years, and before Michaelmas the first lessee purchases the fee-simple, so that now by this means his term is drowned; in this case the second lease shall begin at Michaelmas. Dyer 112. Plow. 432.

So if one makes a lease to A. for twenty years, and A. makes a lease of the land to B. for two years, rendring rent, and after A. makes a lease for the rest of his time to C. by deed; this lease, is a good lease of the rent and reversion; and so it is also without attornment, if there be any consideration given for it; for then it is also a good lease for all the rest of the term after the two years. 4 Co. 53.

So if one makes a lease to A. for twenty years, if he lives so long, rendring rent, and after he makes a lease to B. by indenture for eighty years, to begin presently, or grants the reversion to begin at a day past, or the like; in all these cases, the rent will pass; and it will be a good lease for the land for so many of the years as shall be to come after the first lease ended. But if the second lease be by parol without a deed, the reversion as a reversion will not pass, and the grant will be void if there be nothing else to help it. And in in cases where the second lease is void, although the first lessee surrenders his estate, or his estate ends by a condition, yet the second lease is not hereby made good. But if the second lease for years after another lease for life or years be made for money, so as it may be said to pass by way of bargain and sale; this may help the matter; for in this case, although it be by word only, it may pass the reversion and the rent also: but in most cases it is good for the remainder of the term after the first lease ended. And if the second lease be to begin after the end of the former lease; in this case the former lease is no impediment at all to the validity of the latter lease, but the latter lease is good notwithstanding. Co. 155. Plow. 432, 234. Hil. 6 Jac. Finch v. Vaughan. Dyer 112. 2 Co. 35, 36.

(K) Of the Commencement, Continuance and End of the Term or Estate.

A Lease for years may begin at a day to come, as at Michaelmas next, or three or ten years after, or after the death of the lessor, or of J. S. and it is as good as where it begins presently. But a lease for life of any thing whatsoever, whether it be in livery or in grant, if it be in esse before, cannot begin at a day to come. And therefore if a lease be made habendum from Michaelmas next, or from the day of the making it, or after the death of the lessor, or after the death of J. S. to the lessee for life; this lease is not good: but in case of a lease of land made thus, it is sometimes made good by the livery of seisin. 5 Co. 1. Co. Lit. 48. Plow. 256, 257.

But all leases for years, whether they begin in presenti or in futuro, must be certain that is, they must have a certain beginning and a certain ending, and so the continuance of the term must be certain, otherwise they are not good. And yet if the years be certain when the lease is to take effect in interest or possession, it is sufficient; for until that time it may depend upon an uncertainty, viz. upon a possible contingent precedent before it begins in possession or interest, or upon a limitation or contingent subsequent: but when it is to be reduced to a certainty upon a contingent precedent, the contingent must happen in the lives of the parties. And although there appears no certainty of years in the lease, yet if by reference to a certainty it may be made certain, it is sufficient. Id certum est quod certum reddi potest. As if A. seised of lands in fee grants to B. that when B. shall pay to A. twenty shillings, that from thenceforth he shall hold the land for twenty-one years, and after B. pays the twenty shillings; in this case B. shall have a good lease for twenty-one years from thenceforth. And if A. grants to B. that if his tenant for life shall die, that B. shall have the land for ten years; this is a good lease. And if one makes a lease for years after the death of C. if C. dies within ten years; this is a good lease if C. dies within the ten years; otherwise not. But if A. be seised of land in fee, and lease it to B. for ten years, and it is agreed between them that B. shall pay to A. a hundred pounds at the end of the said ten years, and that if he does so, and shall pay the said hundred pounds, and a hundred pounds at the end of every ten years, that then the said B. shall have a perpetual demise and grant of the premises from ten years to ten years continually following, extra memoriam hominum, &c. although this is a good lease for the first ten years, yet it is void for all the rest for uncertainty. Co. 155. 6 Co. 35. Co. Lit. 45. Plow. 83, 270.

And if a lease be made to begin from the nativity of Christ, and he does not say which nativity, as next, &c. it is void for uncertainty. Hil. 16 Jac. in Scacc.

And yet if a lease for years be made of land in lease for life, to have and to hold from the death of the tenant for life; this is a good lease. So if it be, to have and to hold from Michaelmas next after the death of the tenant for life, or from Michaelmas next after the determination of the estate of the tenant for life, these are good leases. Plow. 192, 523.

So if there be a former lease in being for life or years, and another lease for years is made of the land, to have and to hold from the end of the former estate by surrender, forfeiture, or otherwise, for twenty years; or to have and to hold from the surrender, forfeiture, or other determination of the former lease, if there be any, and if there be none, for twenty years; these and such like leases are good, and this commencement is certain enough. 6 Co. 36.

And if one makes a lease to begin after the death of J. S. and to continue until Michaelmas, which shall be Anno Domini 1650, this is a good lease. Plow. 525. and in 17 Jac. B. R. agreed.

If a man has a lease of land for an hundred years, and he makes a lease of this land to another, to have and to hold to him for forty years, to begin after his death; this is a good lease for the whole forty years, if there shall be so many of the hundred years to come at the time of the death of the lessor. But if the lessor grants the land to another, to have and to hold to him for and during all the residue of the term of an hundred years that shall shall be to come at the time of the death of the grantor; this is void for uncertainty. And yet if in this case he grants withal, all his estate, or all his term, or all his interest in the premises of the deed, and then says, to have and to hold the land, &c. to the grantee for all the residue of the term of an hundred years that shall be to come at the time of his death; by this the whole estate and interest of the grantor into the land passes presently by these words in the premises of the deed. And if in this case the lessee for a hundred years makes a lease of the land, to have and to hold after his death for a hundred years; this will be a good lease for as many of the first hundred years as shall be to come at the time of his death. Lit. § 437. Bro. Grant. 154. Co. 155. Plow. 520, 521.

If a man makes a lease for twenty-one years, if J. S. lives so long, or if the coverture between J. S. and D. S. shall so long continue, or if J. S. shall continue to be parson of Dale so long; these and such like leases are good. But if A. makes a lease to B. for so many years as A. and B. or either of them, shall live, not naming any certain number of years; this cannot be a good lease for years. So if the parson of Dale makes a lease of his glebe for so many years as he shall be parson there; this is not certain, neither can it be made so by any means. And yet if a parson shall make a lease from three years to three years, so long as he shall be parson; this is a good lease for six years, if he continues parson so long, and for the residue void for uncertainty. So if I make another lease of land until he be promoted to a benefice; this is no good lease for years, but void for uncertainty. Co. Lit. 45. Plow. 27.

If I have a rent-charge of twenty pounds per annum, and let it to another until he has levied a hundred pounds; this is a good lease for five years. But if I have a piece of land of the value of twenty pounds per annum, and I make a lease of it to another until he shall levy out of the profits thereof a hundred pounds; this is no good lease for years, but void for uncertainty. 6 Co. 35. 14 H. 8. 10. Plow. 274.

If A. makes a lease to B. for ninety-nine years, to begin after the death of A. on condition to be avoided upon the doing of divers acts by others; and after makes another lease of the land, habendum after the determination or redemption of the former lease; this is a good lease, and certain enough. Per Justice Bridgman.

If A. makes a lease of land to B. for so many years as B. has in the manor of Dale, and B. has then a lease for ten years of the manor of Dale; this is a good lease for ten years. But if A. makes a lease of land until B. upon an execution shall be satisfied the duty for which the execution is sued; this lease is void for uncertainty. And if a lease be made during the minority of J. S. or until J. S. shall come to the age of twenty-one years; these are good leases; and if J. S. dies before he comes to his full age, the lease is ended. But if a lease be made to another until a child that now is in it's mother's belly shall come to the age of twenty-one years; this lease is not good. And if a lease be made for so many years as J. S. shall name; in this case if J. S. names a certain number of years in the life-time of the party lessor, this is a good lease. But if a lease be made for so many years as the executor of the lessor or lessee shall name; this lease is void. Plow. 273, 522, 523. F. N. B. 6 N. 14 H. 8. 11. 6 Co. 35.

But here observe, that in all these cases of uncertain leases made with such limitations as aforesaid, as until such a thing be done, or so long as such a thing continues, &c. that if livery of seisin be made upon them, they may be good leases for life, determinable on these contingents although they be no good leases for years. Plow. 27. 6 Co. 35.

And in some special cases a lease may be good notwithstanding some uncertainty in the continuance of it; for a lease may cease for a time, and revive again; as if tenant in tail makes a lease for years, reserving twenty shillings, and after takes a wife and dies without issue; in this case as to him in reversion the lease is merely void; but if he endows the wife of the tenant in tail of the land, as to the wife, it is revived again. So if tenant in tail makes a lease for life or years rendering rent, and dies without issue, his wife enseint with a son, and he in reversion enters; in this case as against him the lease is void; but after the son is born, the lease is good again if it be within the statute. So if tenant in fee-simple takes a wife, and then makes a lease for years, and dies; the wife is endowed; in this case he shall avoid the lease, but after her decease the lease shall be in force again. Co. Lit. 46. 10 E. 3. 26.

Antiently there were no leases for years but what were for short terms, which were little regarded; this was the reason why if a real action was brought against the person who had the freehold, and a recovery was thereupon had, though by covin, yet the lessee for years, whose estate was precedent to the freehold, was bound by this recovery, and could not falsify till the statute 21 H. 8. c. 15. and therefore the leases for years usually made being but short, a life was presumed to have a longer continuance than any term; and therefore a devise of such a term after a life was void. Will. 574, 575.

A. possessed

A. possessed for a long term for years, made a lease to B. for five years, and covenanted for himself and his executors to renew the lease at the same rent, and on the same covenants, upon the request of B. within the term; B. died within the term, having laid out a considerable sum in improvements, and the executors within the term requested A. the lessor to make a new lease for fifty years, at the old rent. Lord chancellor decreed lessor to renew, but not for so long as was requested, but for twenty-one years, that being the usual term for leasing. 2 Will. 196.

(L) Of Forfeiture by Lessees.

WHERE a man makes a lease for life or years, upon a condition of re-entry for a forfeiture, or that the lease shall be void if the lessee assigns or aliens it without licence; and afterwards the lessee assigns it without licence; this is a forfeiture; and such a forfeiture against which this court cannot relieve, because it is unknown what shall be the measure of the damages; for the court never relieves but in such cases where it can give some compensation in damages, and where there is some rule to be the measure of such damages, to avoid being arbitrary. 8, 9 Mod. 113.

(M) Where a Lease for Life or Years shall be void ipso facto by the Death of the Lessor, or by other Means, or not, but voidable by Entry, &c. and how.

LEASES for lives or years are of three natures; some are good in law, some avoidable by entry, and some void without entry.

Of such as are good in law, some are good at the common law; as leases made by tenant in fee-simple, notwithstanding they be for longer time than three lives or twenty-one years; some by act of parliament, as leases made by tenant in tail, leases made by a bishop seised in fee in the right of his church alone without the chapter, leases made by a man seised in fee-simple or fee-tail of land in the right of his wife, together with his wife, for twenty-one years or three lives, according to the statutes.

And of such leases as are void also, some are void at the common law, and that sometimes in presenti, as in the cases before of leases for years that have no certainty in them, or leases for lives made without livery of seisin, and the like. And some are void in futuro; as if a tenant in tail makes a lease for years, warranted or not warranted by the statute, and after dies without issue; this lease is void as to him in reversion or remainder: Cessante statu primitivo cessat derivativus. So if a prebend, parson or vicar, makes a lease for years not warranted by the statutes; this is void by the death of the lessor, and the successor needs not make any entry or claim to avoid it. So if a tenant for life makes a lease for years, and after dies; in this case the lease for years is void; and therefore in all these and such like cases no acceptance of rent after will affirm such leases. But otherwise it is in cases of leases for years made by bishops, although they be confirmed by dean and chapter; and of leases made by deans and chapters, or tenant in tail, as to their successors and issues, when the leases are not warranted by the statutes: and otherwise it is also in the cases of leases for life made by these or any of the former lessors; for in all cases of leases for life it must be avoided by entry, &c. and therefore such leases are not void but voidable, viz. the leases of bishops and deans after their death by their successors, by the statute law, and the leases of tenants in tail by their issues after their death by the common law. And in these and such like cases the acceptance of the rent by the issue or successor will make good the lease at least for their time. Co. Lit. 45. 3 Co. 59. 65. 7 Co. 8.

If a lease be made for years, on condition that upon such a contingent it shall be void; in this case so soon as the thing happens the lease is void ipso facto without any re-entry, &c. But if a lease for life be made on such a condition; in this case the lessor must enter, &c. before the lease will be void. 3 Co. 65.

(N) What shall be said a good Lease at Will, or not.

IF one makes a lease to another during the will and pleasure of him that lets, or him that takes, or both, (for so in effect is every lease at will); this is a good lease at will. So if one makes a feoffment in fee, or lease for life, &c. and does not make livery of seisin, and so perfect the estate, the feoffee or lessee has only an estate at will.

But if a bargain and sale be made of land, and the same is void, or a corporation grants land, and the grant is void; by this there is no lease at will made. 14 H. 8. 12. Co. Lit. 55, 56. 270.

(O) Of Repairs, &c. by Lessees.

A Lease was made for a long term of years, and in the lease there was a covenant that the lessee should repair; the lessee makes an under-lease to J. S. who is in possession; the under-lessee is not bound by this covenant in equity, there being no assignment of the term; but the proper remedy is against the first lessee and his executors, &c. If a man makes a lease rendering rent, and the lessee assigns to an insolvent person, the lessee in equity shall be liable to pay the rent. 1 Vern. 87, 88.

If a lessee for a long term of years covenants to lay out 200*l.* upon the premises within the first ten years, and lays out but 30*l.* and after thirty years of the lease are expired, the lessor brings an action of covenant, and recovers 150*l.* damages; equity will neither relieve against the damage, nor decree the money to be now laid out in improvements; for per lord chancellor, though the damage seems excessive, yet the jury were proper judges; and to decree it to be laid out now the lease is almost expired, is not proper; for it is probable the lessee would not be so careful in laying it out in lasting improvements, as he would be were it laid out at first. 1 Vern. 316, 317.

The plaintiff let a farm to the defendant by lease at an annual rent, and the defendant covenanted, among other things, not to plough any of the pasture land; and if he did plough up any part of it, that he would pay after the rate of twenty shillings per acre per annum: but the defendant ploughing up some of the pasture, an injunction was moved for. The court would not grant any injunction, and declared, if the defendant was plaintiff to be relieved against paying twenty shillings an acre for ploughing, they would not relieve him. 2 Vern. 119.

Long building leases of infants' estates, where for their benefit, have been often decreed by the court of chancery. Ibid. 225. (a)

(P) Of Waste committed by Lessees.

A Lessee for years without impeachment of waste, remainder to the bishop of London, upon a bill brought by the bishop, was enjoined from digging the ground for brick. Will. 527.

Lessee for years, without waste, cannot pull down an house, or the trees that are a defence or ornament to the house, but may open mines. Will. 528.

Of Lease and Release.(A) A Conveyance by Lease and Release, what.

A Conveyance by lease and release, is where he who is to convey any lands or tenements first makes a lease (or bargain and sale) of the premises to the person to whom the same is to be conveyed for six months, a year, &c. but usually for a year, to the intent that by virtue thereof the lessee may be in the actual possession of the premises granted by the lease, (or bargain and sale) and intended to be released to him; and then the lessee (or bargainee) by virtue of the statute of the 27 H. 8. c. 10. for transferring uses into possession, is enabled to take a grant or release of the reversion and inheritance of the said lands, to the use of himself and his heirs for ever, &c. And then a release (usually dated the day next after the date of the lease, reciting the said lease and declaring the uses) is accordingly made; which in this case is a conveyance of one's right or interest that he has in a thing to another who has the possession thereof.

A lease and release are but one conveyance, and in the nature of one deed. Mod. 252.

Lease and release is now become the most common conveyance of lands. It amounts to a feoffment; for by the said statute the uses are transferred into the possession, so that thereby the place of livery of seisin is supplied; which indeed saves much trouble, especially when the bargainor, &c. lives at a distance from the premises; in which case a letter of attorney to make livery was obliged to be made, otherwise the bargainor, &c. was to deliver seisin in person.

(B) Things requisite in a Lease (or Bargain and Sale) for a Year.First, With Respect to the Consideration.

IT is requisite, and the usual and best way, to mention a consideration of money, as five shillings, or some other small sum, though it be never paid; for it was a question upon a lease for a year made by the words demise, grant and to farm let, rendering a pepper-corn rent, whether the release could operate upon it? And it was objected that the release was void, because there was no entry found, nor any consideration to raise an use, being but a pepper-corn, which is not sufficient, for it is to be paid out of the profits of the land. Chief justice North at first said, the reservation seemed to him not to be sufficient to raise an use, because the use must be raised out of the land, and united to it before a release can result out of it. But Windham just. was of opinion, that the reservation, though but a pepper-corn, would raise an use. And after time taking to advise, judgment was given, that the word grant would make the land pass by way of use; and that the reservation of a pepper-corn is a good consideration to raise an use to support a recovery. Also that the lease being within the statute of uses, there needs be no actual entry to make the lessee capable of the release; for by virtue of the statute he shall be adjudged to be in actual possession. 2 Mod. 252, 253.

If the words bargain and sell, in consideration of money, be in a lease; or if in consideration of money he does demise, &c. there an use will arise by the statute of uses. But if it be only rendering rent out of the land, that seems not to be a sufficient consideration to raise an use. Mod. 262, 263.

Secondly, With respect to the Estate and Possession.

The person who makes the bargain and sale for a year, must be in the actual possession at the time of the sale, otherwise he cannot make it.

But if he has not the possession before the sale, he must enter upon the land, and seal and deliver the deed upon the land to the bargainee; and this puts the bargainee into possession. Vide Carter 161. Cro. Eliz. 483, 446, 447. Dalison 81. Lev. 47, 270, 271, 272. 3 Lev. 387.

And if a man is seised in fee, and makes a lease for years, unless he gives possession, and the lessee enters, he must raise an use. Mod. 263.

Upon a lease for a year, it being within the statute of uses, there is no need of an actual entry to make the lessee capable of taking the release; for by the said statute he is deemed in actual possession. 2 Mod. 252, 253.

If a lease for years be made, without any consideration of money, the lessee has not any estate till entry; for before entry he has but an interesse termini, and no possession. Co. Lit. 278. a. 46. b.

Neither has the lessor any reversion till the lessee's entry; nor will a release to him, which enures by way of enlarging an estate, operate without a possession; for before a possession there is no reversion. Co. Lit. 270. a. Cro. Jac. 169. pl. 9.

By a bargain and sale of the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues, and profits, &c. the bargainee by virtue of the statute of uses becomes possessed, 2 Co. 35. b. (it being a term) without any attornment, and he may without attornment distrain or bring an action of debt for rent. Vaugh. 51. 8 Co. 93. b. 94. a.

Thirdly, With respect to Inrolment.

There needs no inrolment of a bargain and sale for years, that executes by the statute without it. 2 Co. 35. b. 36. a. 8 Co. 93. 2 Roll. Abr. 204. 17 Vin. 172.

(C) Things requisite in a Release.

First, With Respect to the Consideration.

A Release will operate without a consideration, but it is convenient to put a valuable consideration in, as money, or love and affection, or marriage, &c. for since the statutes of 13 Eliz. c. 5. and 27 Eliz. c. 4. against fraudulent conveyances, if a man makes a voluntary feoffment, or other conveyance, without good consideration, it shall be fraudulent against a purchaser for a real consideration, or a mortgagee, a judgment or statute-creditor, for good consideration.

But it shall be good against the party, his executors, administrators, &c. Cro. Jac. 271. pl. 3.

Secondly, With respect to the Estate and Possession.

It has been the great wisdom and prudence of the sages of our law to provide, that no possibility, right, title or chose in action, may be granted or assigned to strangers, for that would make a multiplicity of suits, and great oppression to the people; neither can they be transferred by act in law; but all rights, titles and actions may, by the prudence and policy of the law, be released to the terre-tenant, for the reason of his repose and quiet, and for avoidance of contentions and suits. 10 Co. 48. a.

Wherever a release is made, it is absolutely necessary that the releasee be in possession of some estate at the time of the release. Lit. § 447.

1. He who makes a release of lands must have an estate in himself, out of which the estate may be derived to the releasee.

2. The releasee must have an estate in possession in deed or in law, in the land whereof the release is made, as a foundation for the release.

3. There must be a privity of estate between the releasor and releasee.

4. And there must be sufficient words in law, not only to make the release, but also to create and raise a new estate, or the release will not be good. Co. Lit. 271.

If a man occupies as tenant at sufferance, a release will not enure to him for want of privity. Lit. § 461.

His being tenant at sufferance is not good to vest any estate in him for want of privity between them; and a release to him, as to him who had the reversion, is void, because he had not any possession, there being no estate in him; and an estate cannot be vested in him in reversion by this means; for if tenant for life releases to him in reversion, it is void by way of release; and it cannot pass as a surrender for want of apt words. Cro. Eliz. 21, Dyer 251.

But where a man is in possession by virtue of a lease at will, there a release shall operate by reason of the privity between the parties. And it is vain to make an estate by livery of seisin to another who has the possession before. Lit. § 461, 462.

Thirdly, With respect to the Words in a Release.

If I let land for life or years, and release all the right I have without the word heirs, this at the common law is but an estate for life; but if I release to him and his heirs, or to him and the heirs of his body, then this is an inheritance. Lit. § 465.

Fourthly, With respect to Recitals, the Uses, Conditions, Defeasances, Warranties and Covenants.

A release may have one or more recitals in it (which is most commonly the case) yet it is good without any.

If the words, to the only use and behoof of the said A. B. and his heirs and assigns for ever, or such like words, are not in the release, then the estate executes by the statute of uses, and the trust is void.

Where no use is declared, it is to the use of the releasor and his heirs.

Where a release is made to A. B. his heirs and assigns for ever, to the only use and behoof of the releasee, his heirs and assigns for ever, in trust for the said C. D. (which said C. D. must be a party to the deed, and a consideration of 5 s. to be paid by the releasee, and the purchase-money declared to be paid by C. D. the cestuy que trust) if these words are not in the deed, then the estate executes by the statute of uses, and the trust is void.

In case of lease and release to make a tenant to the præcipe in a common recovery, if the release is made to the tenant and his heirs; it must also be to the use of him, his heirs and assigns for ever; for the releasee must be absolute tenant of the freehold.

A release that enures by way of passing an estate, &c. may be made upon condition, or with a defeasance; so as the condition be contained in the release, or delivered at the same time with it. Co. Lit. 236.

And although there may be warranties, covenants, and such additions in releases, (which is usually the case), yet they are good without them.

(D) Of setting aside a Lease and Release, &c.

A. Devised lands to J. S. and his heirs, but the will was defectively executed, and afterwards the heir at law, in consideration of one hundred guineas paid him by J. S. the devisee, by deed, reciting that this will was duly executed, released to the devisee all his right to the estate devised; and after that, there being debts appointed by the will to be paid, the devisee told the heir, that it would facilitate the raising of the money for the payment of the debts, (if he the heir) would join in a lease and release of the devised premises; and thereupon, for fifty guineas more paid to the heir, he, together with the devisee, by lease and release conveyed the premises to J. N. and his heirs in consideration of 4000 l. mentioned to be paid by J. N. and a receipt was given; but in truth this purchase-money was to be paid, but J. N. was only a trustee for J. S. The court set aside this lease and release, upon payment of the one hundred and fifty guineas and interest; and said, either suppressio veri, or suggestio falsi, is a good reason to set aside any release or conveyance; and that to recite in a deed (as in this case) that the will was duly executed, when it was not, is suggestio falsi, and to conceal from the heir (as here) that the will was not duly executed, is suppressio veri. Will. 239, 240, 727.

PRECEDENTS OF

Leases and Releases.

A Bargain and Sale for a Year.

THIS Indenture, made the 1st day of September in the 14th year of the reign of our sovereign lord George the Second, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, and so forth, and in the year of our Lord 1740. (a) Between A. B. of F. in the county of S. gent. of the one part, and J. B. of A. in the said county of S. gent. of the other part, Witnesseth, that as well for and in consideration of the sum of five shillings (b) of good and lawful money of England, by him the said J. B. to him the said A. B. in hand well and truly paid, before the sealing and delivery hereof, the receipt whereof he the said A. B. doth hereby acknowledge, and thereof and therefrom doth acquit and discharge the said J. B. his heirs, executors and administrators, and every of them, for ever by these presents, as also for divers other good causes and considerations, him the said A. B. hereunto moving, he the said A. B. hath bargained and sold, and doth by these presents bargain and sell unto the said J. B. his executors administrators and assigns (c) all that messuage or tenement, and two acres of land, with the appurtenances, situate, lying and being in G. in the said county of S. and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents issues and profits, of all and singular the said premises (d), together with all deeds, rescripts, and muniments whatsoever, touching, or any ways concerning the same premises, now in the possession of him the said A. B. or which he can any ways come at without suit in law: To have and to hold the said messuage or tenement, and two acres of land, situate, lying and being in G. aforesaid, in the said county of S. and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders,

A bargain and sale for a year, to enable the bargainee to take a release.

(a) No person can make a bargain and sale for a year, who hath not the actual possession at the time of the sale. If he hath it not before the sale, he must enter upon the land, and seal and deliver the deed afterwards upon the land to the bargainee; and this puts the bargainee into possession, and purges disseisins, &c. Vid. title Entry. Carter 161. Cro. El. 483. pl. 19, 446, 447. pl. 11. Dallison 81. pl. 20. 3 Lev. 387. 1 Lev. 47, 270, 271, 272.

Where a man is seised in fee, and makes a lease for years, unless he gives possession, and the lessee enters, he must raise a use. 1 Mod. 263.

(b) The best way to make the matter clear, is to mention a consideration of five shillings, or some other sum, though it be never paid; for where a lease was made for a year, by the words demise, grant and to farm let, rendering a pepper-corn rent, it came to be a question upon a special verdict, whether the release could operate upon it? and against it, it was objected, that the release was void, for that there was no entry found, nor any consideration to raise an use: all the consideration mentioned in the reservation being but a pepper-corn, which is not sufficient, for that it is to be paid out of the profits of the land.

And North, chief justice, at first said, that the reservation did seem to him not to be sufficient to raise a use, for that a use must be raised out of the land, and united to it before a rent can result out of it.

Windham, justice, was of opinion, that the reservation, though but a pepper-corn would raise a use.

The court took time to advise it. Barker and Keet, 1 Mod. Rep. 262.

Afterwards judgment was given, that the word grant would make the land pass by way of use; and, That the reservation of a pepper corn is a good consideration to raise a use to support a recovery.

Also, that this lease being within the statute of uses, there need be no actual entry to make the lessee capable of the release; for by virtue of the statute, he shall be adjudged to be in actual possession. 2 Mod. Rep. 252, 253.

A Release upon the Bargain and Sale for a Year.

THIS Indenture, (d) made, the second day of September in the fourteenth year of the reign of our soveraign lord George the Second, by, &c. and in the year of our Lord 1740, Between A. B. of F in the county of S. gent. of the one part, and J. B. of A. in the said county of S. gent. of the other part Witnesseth, that as well for and in consideration of the sum of one hundred pounds (e) of lawful money of England, by him the said J. B. to him the said A. B. in hand paid, before the sealing and delivery hereof, the receipt whereof he the said A. B. doth hereby acknowledge, and thereof and therefrom doth acquit and discharge the said J. B. his heirs, executors and administrators, and every of them for every by these presents, as also for diverse other good causes and considerations him the said A. B. hereunto moving, he the said A. B. hath granted, bargained, sold, remised, released, and for ever quit-claimed and confirmed, and doth by these presents, grant, bargain, sell, remise, release, and for ever quit claim (f) and confirm unto the said J. B. his heirs and assigns, in his actual possession now being (g) by virtue of one indenture of bargain and sale for one year thereof made

(a) It is not necessary in a bargain and sale for years to have a reservation of rent; because the consideration of money raises the use: but where it is by demise, grant, and to farm let, there ought to be a reservation of rent at the least to raise a use; and whether that will do, it being a thing issuing out of the land only, was a great question. Vide 1 Mod. Rep. 263. But afterwards adjudged that it would. 2 Mod. 252, 253.

(b) 27 H. cap. 10.

(c) So far in possession as to accept of a release of the inheritance, but not to bring trespass until actual entry. Carter 67, 68.

But tenant by statute or elegit may after the land extended bring trespass without entry. 1 Mod. Rep. 217. 5 Rep. 124. a. Carter 66, 78.

(d) A lease and release are but one conveyance, and in the nature of one deed. 1 Mod. 252.

(e) A release will operate without a consideration; but it is convenient to put a valuable consideration in, as money, or love and affection, or marriage, &c.

Note; Since the making of the statutes of 13 El. cap. 5. and 27 El. cap. 4. against fraudulent conveyances, if a man makes a voluntary feoffment, or other conveyance, without good consideration, it shall be fraudulent against a purchaser for a real consideration, or a mortgagee, a judgment or statute-creditor, for good considerations. See the Statutes, and Cro. Jac. 270, 271. pl. 3. They are fraudulent against a purchaser; tho' they are good amongst themselves.

Note; Upon a trial, the consideration of the money paid, for which the judgment or statute was entered into, must be proved.

(f) Remise, release, and quit claim, are the words used by Littleton, sect. 445.

It hath been the great wisdom and prudence of the sages of our law, to provide, that no possibility, right, title, or chose in action, may be granted or assigned to strangers; for that would make multiplicity of suits, and great oppression to the people; neither can they be transferred by act in law; but all rights, titles and actions may, by the prudence and policy of the law, be released to the terre-tenant, for the reason of his repose and quiet, and for avoidance of contentions and suits. 10 Rep. 48. a.

(g) Wherever a release is made, it is absolutely necessary, that he to whom the release is made be in possession of some estate at the time of the release, Litt. sect. 447.

But if a man occupies as tenant at sufferance, a release will not enure to him for want of privity. Litt. sect. 461. His being tenant at sufferance is not good to vest any estate in him for want of privity between them; and a release to him, as to him who had the reversion, is void, because he had not any possession; there being no estate in him. And an estate cannot be vested in him in reversion by this means; for if tenant for life releases to him the reversion, it is void by way of release; and as a surrender it cannot pass for want of apt words. Cro. Eliz. pl. 2. Dyer 251. pl. 91.

But where a man is in possession by virtue of a lease at will, there a release shall operate by reason of the privity between the parties. And it is vain to make an estate by livery of seisin to another who hath the possession before. Litt. sect. 461, 462.

He that makes a release of lands must have an estate in himself, out of which the estate may be derived to the releasee; and the releasee is to have an estate in possession in deed or in law, in the land whereof the release is made made by the said A. B. to him the said J. B. which said indenture bears date the day next before the day of the date of these presents, and by force and virtue of the statute for transferring of uses into possession, All that messuage or tenement, and two acres of land, with the appurtenances, situate, lying, and being in G. aforesaid, in the said county of S. and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof, and of every part and parcel thereof, together with all ways, passages, waters, water-courses, commons, profits, and appurtenances to the same premises, or any part or parcel thereof belonging or in any wise appertaining; together also with all the estate, right, title, interest, property, claim, and demand (a) whatsoever of him the said A. B. of, in and unto the said premises, or any part or parcel thereof; To have and to hold the said messuage or tenement, lands and premises, before by these presents granted, bargained, fold, remised, released, quit-claimed and confirmed, or meant, mentioned, or intended to be herein and hereby granted, bargained, fold, remised, released, quit-claimed and confirmed; and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof, and of every part and parcel thereof, (b) with their and every of their appurtenances, unto the said J. B. his heirs and assigns for ever; to the only use and behoof of the said J. B. his heirs and assigns (c) for ever; (or it may be thus, viz.) to the releasee, his heirs and assigns for ever, to the uses, intents and purposes herein after mentioned, and to no other use, intent or purpose whatsoever, viz. to the use of A. B. &c. and so declare the uses: or else it may be thus, To A. B. his heirs and assigns, to the only use and behoof of the said A. B. his heirs and assigns for ever, (d) in trust nevertheless for the said C. D. Now if the words, (to the only use and behoof of the said A. B. his heirs and assigns for ever) are not in the deed, then the estate doth execute by the Statute of Uses, and the trust is void.

A use is not executed by the Statute of Uses, unless the words (to the only use and behoof of A. B. his heirs and assigns for ever), are in the deed, made without confidence.

In a lease and release to make a tenant to the præcipe, where the release to make the tenant to the præcipe is made to A. B. and his heirs, (viz. the tenant to the præcipe) it must be also to the use of him the said A. B. his heirs and assigns for ever; for the releasee must be absolute tenant of the freehold.

A release that doth enure by way of passing away an estate, &c. may be made upon condition, or with a defeasance; so as the condition be contained in the release, or delivered at the same time with it. Co. Litt. 236.

And tho' there may be a recital, covenants, warranty, &c. inserted in this release, yet it is good without any such additions.

To make a tenant to a præcipe the release must be made to him and his heirs, to the use of him and his heirs for ever. Release may be made upon condition.—No covenants necessary.

A Lease for a Year to precede a Release.

THIS Indenture Tripartite made, &c. Between A. &c. of the first part, B. and C. &c. of the second part, and D. and E. &c. of the third part, Witnesseth, that for Parties. and in consideration of 5 s. a-piece of lawful, &c. to the said A. B. and C. in hand, &c. by Consideration. the said D. and E. well and truly paid, the receipt whereof the said A. B. and C. do hereby made as a foundation for the release; there must be privity of estate between the releasor and releasee; and be sufficient words in law not only to make the release, but also to create and raise a new estate, or the release will not be good. Co. Litt. 271.

(a) These are Littleton's words, and necessary to be put in. Litt. sect. 445.

(b) As it is said before, in the lease for a year, these words do vest the reversion, &c. in him. So that by virtue of the lease and release, and statute of uses, he may distrain, or bring debt for rent, without attornment. Vide Vaugh. 50, 51. This was at the common law: but now attornments are gone by the statute of 5 Annæ.

(c) If I let land for life, or years, and release all the right I have without the word heirs, this at the common law is but an estate for life; but if I release to him and his heirs, or to him and the heirs of his body, then this is an inheritance. Litt. sect. 465.

(d) If these words are not in, then there being no use declared, it will be to the use of the releasor, as it is in case of a Feoffment, where if I convey lands which I have on the part of the mother, to J. S. and his heirs, without consideration, the use will be void; and the land shall again return to me and my heirs on the part of the mother; or the law construes the use, the same in state and quality as the land was. Hob. 31. Co. Litt. 13. a. 31. a.

Rep. 100. b. 9 Rep. 8. a. b. 11. a. Dyer 134.

So that a feoffment without consideration (and the like of any other conveyance) to a man and his heirs; and says not to whose use, it shall be to the use of the feoffor and his heirs. 9 Rep. 8. a. b. 11. a. See Lutw. 823.

So where it is to A. B. his heirs and assigns for ever; to the only use and behoof of the releasee, his heirs and assigns for ever, in trust for the said C. D. (which said C. D. must be a party to the deed, and a consideration of to be paid by the releasee, and the purchase money declared to be paid by C. D. the cestuy que trust) if these words are not in the deed, then the estate doth execute by the Statute of Uses, and the trust is void.

Grant. acknowledge, and thereof, &c. the said A. and likewise the said B. and C. (at the Parcels. request, and by and with the consent, direction and appointment of the said A. testified by his signing and sealing these presents) Have, and each of them Wath granted, cutors, administrators and assigns, from the — day of — (or from the day next before the day of the date of these presents) for and during, and unto the full end and term of one whole year from thence next ensuing, and fully to be compleat and ended; the said A. the rent of one pepper-corn only, at the feast of — next ensuing the date of these presents, if the same shall be lawfully demanded, To the Intent that by virtue Intent. of these presents, and of the statute for transferring uses into possession, the said D. and E.

 may be in the actual possession of the hereby bargained and sold premises, (or say, of the tioned, or intended to be hereby granted, bargained and sold, with their and every of their appurtenances, and every part and parcel thereof, and may be enabled to accept and take a grant and release of the reversion and inheritance thereof to them and their heirs and assigns, To and for the only proper use and behoof of them the said D. and E. and of their heirs and assigns for ever; (or it may be thus) To such uses as shall be thereby declared. (a) In Witness, &c.

 same parties as are to these presents, shall be mentioned, limited and expressed of and

(a) It is necessary here to observe, that there are several modes whereby an estate may be conveyed so as to avoid dower.

Ex. gratia, by a limitation to the use of the purchaser and a trustee, and their heirs, jointly, in trust nevertheless as to the estate of the trustee for the purchaser and his heirs; or,

To the use of a purchaser and a trustee, and the heirs of a purchaser and a trustee, in trust nevertheless as to the estate of the trustee for the purchaser and his heirs; or

In order to give the purchaser a power of disposing of the estate at any time, without the concurrence of the trustee, the estate may be limited, in the first instance, to the use of the purchaser's appointment by deed or will, and in default thereof, then in either of the above modes; or

In order to preserve the legal inheritance to the purchaser, it may be, in default of his appointment, to the use of a trustee and his heirs, during the purchaser's life, in trust for the purchaser and his assigns, remainder to the use of the purchaser and his heirs. Both which latter forms are combined in the above precedent.

The latter, and certainly the most efficient modes of preventing dower, was, as I have been informed, first introduced upon by Mr. Fearne, whose knowledge and abilities in this line of the profession, certainly stand unrivalled; and though some have entertained doubts as to its efficacy, they appear to me to have arisen, from not having sufficiently considered the nature, effect and operation of such a limitation.

The first cavil which has been made upon the above limitation, is, as to the efficacy of the power of appointment, on which it has been observed, that a limitation of the fee comprehends every power of appointment whatsoever: and that therefore the insertion of it is unnecessary. But this is clearly a mistake. Mr. Fearne in an answer to this observation, contained in an opinion which I have seen, establishes the futility of this observation beyond doubt. For that great lawyer observes, "That a person seised in fee, cannot by a mere instrument in writing, pass that fee, or make it out in another; but a proper form and mode of conveyance is requisite to pass the estate; whereas, under a power of limiting the use, a person may, by such instrument, vest the fee in another without any of the usual ceremonies requisite to a conveyance of lands. The reason is, that in the one case the person can only dispose as owner of the land, in the other he acts instrumentally only, according to his power or authority, and his appointee does not come in as under him, or deriving the estate from him, but comes in under a title paramount; namely, under that conveyance by which the power of appointment was reserved, just in the same manner (as to the point now under consideration) as if the use had been declared to such appointee, in such conveyance itself, instead of awaiting the interposition of the appointment by the persons to whom such power was reserved. This he says is the doctrine upon which the great question in the case of Sir Edward Clere, 6 Co. Rep. 18. was decided, and which has since been confirmed and established by a variety of authorities. And this is the true reason that an appointment under such power (as that in the above precedent) prevents the wife from dower, because the appointee, under the execution of such power, does not derive his title from the husband, or from or out of the estate that he (the husband) was seised of at the time of the appointment, but comes in strictly under the uses of the original conveyance by which such power was reserved. And the uses to be declared by such appointment being in order prior to the use of the fee reserved to the husband, such use, when declared, takes place of the estate of the husband by relation, from the time of the said conveyance to uses, just as it would have done, if originally declared in the said conveyance from which it takes effect."

It is upon this principle that a feme covert may execute a power over her own estate; which she could not do if she were exercising an act of ownership instead of discharging an instrumental authority as an agent, by virtue of a power derived under a third person, or instrument paramount her marriage, by which her capacity of acting upon her property is suspended. Vid. 2 Term Reports, 695. Bac. Max. 92. 1 Vent. 361. This consequence of a power is further illustrated in Ambler's Rep. 341. where it is held, that if a husband be in debt and then executes a power to jointure a wife, that jointure is not void as to creditors, because the wife does not claim under him.

It is necessary also to remark here, that the power is only an additional means given to the husband of alienating again, free from dower, and not of the essence of a limitation to bar dower. The limitation interposed between the estate, for life of the husband and the fee to a trustee and his heirs, during the life of the husband, is equally adequate to effect this purpose, although the power of appointment be omitted. For the interposed clause is clearly a vested remainder, and being so, prevents the husband from an actual seisin of the fee in possession, and is of the essence of the wife's title to dower, which will not attach upon a reversionary interest, which the subsequent limitation to the husband in fee, in such case, must be, if the intermediate estate be vested, and I perceive that it is so, cannot be disputed. But though I take this proposition to be clear, it is prudent to guard against dower, by the insertion of the power of appointment as well as the intervening limitation to the appointee.

Perhaps it may be said, that the interposition of a trustee and his heirs during the life of the purchaser, does not prevent the estate from vesting so far as to entitle the wife to dower, but resembles the interposition of trustees to preserve contingent remainders, which will not hinder the vesting of an estate given to the heirs of one who takes a preceding estate for life, so as to enable the heirs to take by purchase; but that turns upon another principle, laid down in Shelley's case, 1 Rep. 93. and which has nothing to do with a tenancy in dower.

M. to the contrary) it should and might be lawful to and for the said P. at any time or times thereafter during the said then intended coverture, and at all other times, to make such will, gift or disposition of the said several and respective premisses therein and herein before severally and respectively mentioned and intended to be thereby conveyed, assigned and set over, to and for her separate use as aforesaid, and of every of them, and of every

To all, &c. We J. F. and E. J. creditors of R. C. and C. R. send greeting. Whereas the said R. C. and C. R. are and do stand jointly indebted, and do owe unto us the said creditors, divers sums of money which they are willing to satisfy and pay as far as they are able: Now know ye, that we the said creditors, who have hereto subscribed our names and affixed our seals, finding they the said R. C. and C. R. are, by losses and otherwise, disabled to pay our full debts, Do severally and respectively agree and bind ourselves, our heirs, &c. to the said R. C. and C. R. by these presents to accept and take of them the said R. C. and C. R. their, &c. after the rate of — in the pound, in full satisfaction of such debts and sums of money, as they do jointly owe unto us, and every of us respectively the same to be paid at four equal payments; the first payment, &c. — so as the said R. C. and C. R. (for the more sure and better payment of the several sums of money aforesaid, recompence and satisfaction of our and every of our said several debts, after the rate of — in the pound as aforesaid), their executors or administrators, do before the — come jointly and severally bound, with sufficient sureties, unto us and every of us respectively by obligation and with double penalties in due form of law to be made, sealed and delivered to us and each of us, or to our and each of our uses, by the appointments of each of us: Provided always, that neither these presents, nor any thing herein contained, shall bind us, or either or any of us, who have hereunto subscribed our names and put our seals, until all and every of the creditors aforesaid shall have sealed and subscribed the same, on or before the — next ensuing. In Witness, &c.

An Indenture of Licence and Composition from Creditors to a Widow to enable her to administer, &c.

THIS Indenture, made, &c. Between J. F. F. J. and R. C. creditors of C. R. late of — of the one part, and R. R. widow of the said C. R. of the other part: Whereas the said C. R. at and before his death, was indebted unto the said creditors in several sums of money, And whereas the said R. R. hath since her said husband's death scrused and examined his estate and effects, and finding that the same is far short of giving the said creditors a full satisfaction for their just debts, hath hitherto forborne to take out letters of administration of the goods, chattels and estate of her said husband, as to her properly doth belong, according to the laws of this realm: And the said R. R. having acquainted the said creditors therewith, they the said creditors and each of them were and are willing, contented and pleased to accept of — in the pound for their said debts, upon the security of the said R. R. and to be paid at such days and times, and in such manner and form as hereafter is limited, expressed and declared: Now this Indenture witnesseth, that the said J. F. and F. J. and R. C. the creditors before named, have given and granted, and by these presents do give and grant unto the said R. R. shall and may have and take out, in her own name, letters of administration of all and singular the goods, chattels and personal estate of her said deceased husband, without any disturbance or interruption from them or either of them; And that the said creditors before named do for themselves severally and respectively, and for the executors and administrators of each of them, and not jointly nor the one for the other, covenant, promise and grant to and with the said R. R. her executors, administrators and assigns, That if the said R. R. her executors or administrators, do or shall, on or before the — day of — next ensuing the date of these presents, become bound in several obligations, good and sufficient in the law, in several reasonable penalties, unto the said several creditors before named, severally to be conditioned for the payment unto them the said creditors, their several executors, administrators and assigns, of the sum of — of lawful money of Great Britain, for every pound or 20s. of their due and principal debts by the said C. R. in his life-time owing respectively as aforesaid, not accounting any interest for the same sum or any part thereof, to wit, on the — day of — and shall and will also at the costs and charges of the said R. R. her executors or administrators, severally seal, and as their several acts and deeds deliver unto or for the use of the said R. R. several acquittances and discharges in writing sufficient in law, thereby acquitting and releasing as well the said C. R. his executors, administrators and assigns, as also the said R. R. her executors and administrators, of all debts, bonds, bills, claims and demands whatsoever, from the beginning of the world until the day of the date of these presents: And the said creditors, &c. severally and respectively every one by and for himself, his executors and administrators, and not jointly nor the one for the other, do covenant, promise and grant, to and with the said R. R. her executors and administrators, and every of them, by these presents, That if either the said R. R. her executors and administrators, or her or their goods or chattels, or the goods or chattels of her said late husband, or any of them, shall at any time or times hereafter, until or before the said — day of — be arrested, attached, sued, molested or troubled by the above named creditors, or any of them, or by any other person or persons, or by their or any of their means or procurement, or in their way of their right or rights, for or by reason of any debt or debts, so to them or any of them owing by the said C. R. at the time of his decease; That then, and from thenceforth, she the said R. R. her executors and administrators, shall be acquitted, released and discharged against him or them by whom the said R. R. her executors or administrators, her, their or any of their goods or chattels, shall be so arrested, attached, sued, molested or troubled, of and from all debts, actions, claims and demands whatsoever, from the beginning of the world until the day of the date of these presents; and that these presents to be so sealed shall be a sufficient discharge in that behalf against him or them of the said creditors, or their executors or administrators, by whom, or by whose means or procurement, or in whose right she the said R. R. her executors or administrators, her or their goods or chattels, or any of them, shall be so arrested, &c. contrary to the true intent and meaning of these presents: Provided always, That if the said creditors above-named do not or shall at any time before the — sign, seal, and as their act and deed deliver in due form of one part of these presents unto or to the use of the said R. R. that then these presents, every thing therein contained, shall be void and of no effect. And the said R. R. for herself, &c. doth covenant and grant to and with the said creditors and every of them, their Limitations of Uses.

S E C T. I.

Of Deeds declaring (or leading) the Uses of Feoffments, Fines and Recoveries.

(A) Use, what.

AN use (as some define it) is the profit or benefit of lands or tenements. Or, as others define it,

It is the equity and honesty to hold the land in conscientia boni viri. Or, by others described thus :

An use is a trust or confidence reposed in a person, not as to profits issuing out of land, but as a thing collateral annexed in privity to the estate of the land; and to the person touching the land, so that he for whom he is trusted shall take the profits of the land: And the trustee shall dispose of it according to his direction; as for example,

If a feoffment be made to J. S. and his heirs, to the use, profit or behoof of W. S. and his heirs; in this case heretofore J. S. had the estate and property of the land, but W. S. had and was to have the profits in honesty and equity.

So if one agrees with W. S. for a piece of land for 20*l.* and pays him the money, but has no assurance of the land, yet the equity and honesty to have this land is in him that has contracted and paid the money for it.

This trust was called the use of the land; and hence came the course in conveyances to be down in the habendum to whose use the land is to be held; as habendum to A. and his heirs, to the use of A. and his heirs. Co. 121, 122. Co. Lit. 171, 272. b.

The use before described is an use at common law.

But uses may be raised either by transmutation of the estate and possession; as by feoffment, fine or recovery, &c. Or out of the estate of the owner of the land; as by bargain and sale by deed indented and inrolled, or by covenant to stand seised to an use, upon lawful consideration, without transmutation of the estate or possession. Co. Lit. 271. b.

An use cannot rise out of an use, or a way or a common newly created. Carter 46. Co. Fac. 189, 190. pl. 13. Popb. 81.

(B) Trust or Confidence, what. See Atk. Rep. 614. 2 Atk. 300, 438, 570.

THERE is an use of goods and chattels, which is properly called a trust or confidence. For one may have such things to the use of another.

(C) Of the Difference between Uses and Trusts.

AS to the difference between uses and trusts, there ought to be the utmost care not to let trusts be carried on beyond the bounds of uses; for it will introduce different rules which will make great confusion, and be mischievous to the public: And perpetuities in trust will have all the inconveniences as perpetuities in estates in law have. Mic. 9. Int. Lloyd and Carew.

(D) Cestuy que Use, who.

HE for whom a trust or confidence is reposed in any person, and who ought to have the profit of the land by conveyance as aforesaid, is called Cestuy que Use. He had neither jus in re, nor jus ad rem, but only a confidence and trust, for which he had no remedy by the common law: but for the breach of trust his remedy was only by subpœna in chancery.

Co. Lit. 272. b.
But now the statute of uses, 27 H. 8. c. 10. has transferred the possession to the use. Co. Lit. 272. b. Plow. 352. b. 349. b. 1 Co. 121. a. b. 122, 127. 2 Co. 58, 78. 6 Co. 64. Co. 34. Leon. 196. 2 Leon. case 25.

(E) Of the different Kinds of Uses. See 2 Atk. Rep. 149, 568, 583.

USES are either in esse, or in posse, or contingency.

1. Uses in esse are either in possession, reversion or remainder; as when a feoffment made to J. S. to the use of J. W. and his heirs; or to the use of J. W. and after to the use of J. D. and the heirs male of his body, and after to the use of S. T. and his heirs for ever.

2. Uses in posse, or in contingency, may possibly happen to be in possession, reversion or remainder; as where an use is limited to me for life, and after to him that shall be my first son in tail; this is only the possibility of an use, for it may or may not be. 1 Co. 121, 122, 176.

Also uses are either express or implied.

1. An use express is when the use or intent is openly declared and expressed between the parties upon making the estate of land whereunto the use is annexed; as when a feoffment made of land to J. S. and his heirs to the use of W. S. and the heirs of (or heirs male of) the body of the said W. S. or to the end and intent that W. S. and his heirs, or W. S. and the heirs of his body shall take the profits of it, or the like; or when I covenant to stand seized of land to the use of my wife for life, and after of my eldest son and the heirs of his body, or the like.

2. An use implied, is when the use is not declared upon the agreement between the parties, but is left to the construction and made by the operation of law; as, When a man seised of land makes a feoffment in fee, levies a fine, or suffers a common recovery of it to another without any consideration, and it is not agreed nor declared to what use or intent it shall be; this by construction of law shall be to the use of the feoffor, conusor, or recoverer.

But if there be any consideration of money or other thing paid or given, or any rent or annuity reserved, then by construction of law it shall be to the use of the feoffee, conusee, or recoveror; for otherwise the law presumes that the intent of him that did part with the land was so, (viz.) that the other should have the property of the land to his use, and that he himself should take the profits of it.

So when one bargains and sells his land for money to another, and no use is expressed; in such case the law says it shall be to the use of the bargainee and his heirs. Doct. & Stud. 69. 26. Perk. § 533. 2 Co. 50. 9 Co. 11. Dyer 18, 146. 2 Roll. Abr. 781, 782, 789. Vin. 186.

(F) Of the Nature of Uses.

AN use at common law, before the statute hereafter mentioned was made, was, and where that statute does not take place, is nothing but a mere confidence and trust collateral to and distinct from the land annexed in privity of estate, and to the person touching the land to this purpose, that cestuy que use should take the profit of the land, and the feoffee or tenant that was trusted should make estates, and otherwise dispose of the land, as the cestuy que use in his life, or at his death by his last will and testament, should direct and appoint; and if he made no disposition, then that it should go to his heir, so that the feoffee had the freehold or sole property of the thing in him, and cestuy que use had neither jus in re nor jus ad rem, (for if he against the will of the feoffee had entered into the land, he had been a trespasser) but a bare confidence or trust for which the cestuy que use had no remedy, but in chancery.

chancery upon a breach of the trust, and there to have the feoffee imprisoned until he performs the trust according to the order of the court.

These uses, to some purposes, were reputed in law as chattels, and therefore were devisable by will.

And to some purposes as hereditaments, and a kind of inheritance, of which there was a possessio fratris, &c.

And to some purposes, neither chattels nor hereditaments; for they were not esteemed assets in the heir or executor; neither were they reputed as commons, rents, conditions, and such like inheritances which are discontinued or taken away by the alienation of the tertenant, escheat, disseisin, &c. but an use is not so. 1 Co. 120. in Chudleigh's case; and Co. 93. Shelley's case. Kelw. 160. Dyer 12. Bro. Feoffment al Uses 25.

(G) Of Incidents to Uses.

TO every of these uses there were two inseparable incidents: 1. Confidence in the person; and 2. Privity in the estate, expressed by the parties, or implied in law.

When either of these failed, the use was either gone for ever, or suspended for a time at least. And therefore,

If the feoffee to use, upon good consideration, had enfeoffed another of the land that had not notice of the use, the use had been gone for ever; because howsoever here was a privity of the estate, yet here was no confidence in the person; but if the feoffment had been without consideration to such a one, in this case the use had remained still, because the law implied a notice.

So also it seems the law was when it was made in consideration of marriage only.

And if a disseisor, abator or intruder, had come to the possession of the land whereof the use was, although he had notice of the use; yet the use was suspended during their possession, and they should not have been seised to use, as the feoffee was, for they came not to the land in the per, but in the post.

And if a lord by escheat, lord of a villain, or one who had entered for mortmain, or had recovered in a cessavit, &c. had come to such land and had notice of the use, the use had been gone for ever; for these came to the land in the post, and above the use.

And tenant in dower and by the curtesy should not be seised to uses in being, for all these wanted privity of estate.

And if there had been tenant for life, the remainder in fee to the use of another, and the tenant for life had made a feoffment in fee to one that had had notice of the uses, this second feoffee should not have stood seised to the first uses.

So if the husband had made a feoffment in fee of the land of his wife, upon consideration and without any use expressed, he should not have had a subpana, because the feoffee was not in privity of estate of the wife.

And if cestuy que use for life or in tail, the remainder in tail, with divers remainders over in use, had made a feoffment to one that had notice, he should not have been seised to the first uses, causa qua supra.

But otherwise it is of commons, advowsons, and such like appendants or appurtenants; for if tenant in tail, or husband in right of his wife, makes a feoffment of a manor, or of part of it, with an advowson appendant: The advowson, at least after presentment, shall pass as appendant to the manor, or to part of the manor, and not to the estate of the land, which is discontinued by the feoffment. So if a disseisor, abator, intruder, or the lord by escheat, or the like, shall have these things as annexed to the estate of the land in privity, and commons, advowsons, and other hereditaments that are annexed to the possession of the land. Shep. Touch. 502, 503.

(H) Of the Original and Antiquity of Uses.

USES began first when the custom of property began and was brought in, that one man knew his own from another man's, and then was to enjoy his own, and not to be deprived of it without consent or order of law; for then he that had land had two things in him, a possession of the land, and power to take the profits of it; and those being to be distinguished, he might give the freehold or possession to another, and take the profits himself, and they were the rather allowed by the law for a time as reasonable, because they gave man power to dispose of his land by will, which otherwise he could not have done but in some special cases by custom of the place. Shep. Touch. 503.

By Manwood justice.—The commencement of uses has been as long as mankind has been guided by reason; and though no mention is made of uses in our ancient books, yet that is no argument that uses have been but of late times. That uses were not common, therefore were not at all, is non sequitur. 2 Leon. Case 25.

Harper justice said, That uses began about 18 Edw. 2. after which time there was such a general liking of them, that they were used a-new; but they did not come into common practice before the time of king H. 6. when the great contention fell out betwixt the two houses of York and Lancaster, at which time uses were in great estimation for the safety of inheritances. 2 Leon. Case 25.

By Dyer chief justice.—As to the beginning of uses, the same was immediately after the statute of mortmain, at which time all their shifts then in practice were found out, for which see the said stat. 7 Edw. 1. Stat. de Religiosis. And in the stat. 15 R. 2. c. 5. the words Beboof and Use are used, which is the first time they were so in our law; and yet a long time before that statute uses had been in practice. 2 Leon. Case 25.

By Manwood justice—As long as wills have been, trusts and confidences have been; and also as long as marriage has been; and refers to the writ of Causa Matrimonii prolocuti, and the statute of Marlb. c. 6. 2 Leon. Case 25.

But by Harper justice—Whereas it has been said, that an Use has been as long as any marriage has been, and so conceived upon the writ de causa Matrimonii prolocuti; the same is not any reason, because in that case there is not any confidence or trust; for if the marriage does not take effect, the woman shall have her writ de causa Matrimonii prolocuti. In conveyances we are to respect two things, the form and effect of them; and in all cases where the form and effect cannot stand together, the form shall be rejected, and the effect shall stand. Same case.

And by Manwood, Littleton says, That the Cestuy que Use shall be sworn upon inquests, which was not enacted by any statute, but practised by the common law. Ibid.

And that he himself had seen divers ancient deeds of uses; and that in ancient time no man would purchase land to himself alone, but had two or three joint feoffees with him; and he who was first named in the deed was cestuy que use, although no use was declared to him upon the livery, and so the use was known by the occupation of the lands. And then says, that the reason why no mention is made in our ancient books of uses is, because men were then of better consciences than they are now; so that the feoffees did not give occasion to the feoffors to bring subpœna's in chancery to compel them to perform the trusts reposed in them. And before the statute of Westminster the Third, if a man had made a feoffment in fee without declaring the uses of it, it should have been to the use of the feoffee, because there is a sufficient consideration between the feoffor and feoffee, to raise an use, (viz. the cognizory created by the law between them): But now by the said statute such consideration is taken away, and then upon such feoffment without consideration or declaration of uses, is to the use of the feoffor himself. Same case.

1) Why Uses were invented, the Mischiefs thereof, and the Remedies by sundry Statutes.

FEAR and fraud were the occasions of inventing uses.

1. Fear in the time of troubles and civil wars, for saving persons estates from forfeiture.
2. Fraud to defeat just debts, lawful actions, wards, escheats, mortmain, &c. Co. 121. b. pp. 71.

Uses in time were turned into Abuses, and the greatest part of all the lands in the kingdom (especially in the time of the broil between the houses of York and Lancaster) were put in use, partly of fraud and partly of fear, which produced not a few inconveniences.

The stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. of Uses, was made for remedying all mischiefs and abuses in uses, which act was divided into two general branches, viz.

1. The preamble, which expresses the mischiefs.
2. The body of the act, which provides the remedies. Co. 123. b.

The mischiefs in the preamble are these:

1. Whereas by the common law, no land or tenement can pass but by livery or matter of record, or writing if it lies in grant; now by divers and sundry imaginations, subtil inventions and practices, by fraudulent feoffments, fines, recoveries and assurances, craftily made secret uses, intents and purposes.

2. By

2. By last wills, sometimes by parol, and sometimes by signs, in great extremity.
3. By these fraudulent uses many heirs have been unjustly disinherited.
4. The lords have lost their wards, reliefs, and in effect their feignories.
5. No purchaser could be assured of his estate.
6. Nor could any man know against whom to bring his action, or have his execution.
7. Estates created by law in consideration of marriage, as tenancy in dower, and by curtesy, were defeated.
8. Perjuries upon trials of secret uses were committed, and daily increased.
9. The king had lost his escheats for attainders, purchases of aliens, &c.
10. The lords had also lost their escheats. Co. 123. b.

These were the mischiefs; then comes the body of the act, which provides that, Where any person stands and is seised of any lands, tenements, &c. (Note; This statute extends to persons seised, not possessed of any lands, &c.) to any use, all and every such person and persons that have or shall hereafter have any such use, &c. shall from henceforth stand and be seised, and adjudged in lawful seisin, estate and possession, of and in the same lands and tenements, and of and in such estates as they had in the use; and that the estate, right and possession that were in such persons as were or hereafter shall be seised to the use of any such person or persons, be from henceforth clearly deemed in cestuy que use, after such quality, manner and form as they had in the use.

This is the remedy that the makers of that act have provided to salve all the mischiefs aforesaid. Co. 125. b.

Cause of making the stat. 27 H. 8. For the power of Cestuy que use before the statute, see 2 Ld. Raym. 876.

By Harper justice—As to the making the stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. the truth is, the king was displeased at the loss of wardships, and other injuries done to him, for which cause he complained to the judges of the defect of the law in that case; who thereupon shewed the king the causes of those injuries and losses to him; and that if the possession might be enjoined to the use, all would go well, and all the injuries, wrongs and losses which came to him by reason of uses, wills and secret feoffments, would be avoided; for which reason the king, in the 24th year of his reign, commanded his council to frame a bill for that purpose, and present it to the house of commons; but it was then rejected; and the king at that time would have been contented, that the fourth part of the land only should descend; and from that time the king stayed further proceedings in the said cause till the 27 H. 8. at which time it took effect; and their care was to pen the statute so precisely, that that whole estate should be executed by it, so as it did utterly take away all from the feoffees. 2 Leon. Case 25.

By the said statute, the use and possession of land at this day is coupled and conjoined so that they cannot stand apart and divided, but he who has the one must have the other, and the one ensues the other as the shadow does the body; and therefore now upon finer, recoveries and feoffments, the estate settles as the use and intent of the parties is declared by word or writing before the act done; as for example,

If a writing be made between two or more, that one of them shall levy a fine, make a feoffment, or suffer a recovery to the other, to the use and intent that one of them, or another man, shall have it for life, and after another in tail, and after a third in fee-simple; in this case the law settles the estate according to the use and intent declared, so that now what estate a man has in the use, the same he has in the possession.

But for the more full understanding the said statute, and the law at this day, observe, That the statute does not extend to all manner of uses, neither are all uses executed and united to the possession thereby; for,

By such act it plainly appears that every use in esse, viz. in possession, reversion or remainder, is executed by it.

But no contingent use or right is executed by the said act until it comes in esse; for,

To every execution of an use these four things are requisite:

First, There ought to be a person seised.

Secondly, There ought to be a cestuy que use in esse.

Thirdly, There ought to be an use in esse in possession, reversion and remainder.

Fourthly, The estate out of which the use arises ought to be vested in cestuy que use; for the words are, that the estate of such person seised to the use, shall be adjudged in cestuy que use. Co. 126. a.

So that when these four, viz. 1. Seisin in the feoffees; 2. Cestuy que use in rerum natura; 3. Use in esse; and 4. That the estate of the feoffees vests in cestuy que use, then there is an execution of the use within this statute; but if any one of these fail, there is no execution of the use within this statute; and therefore it is agreed that this statute does not execute any use, but only uses in esse; so that the right of a present and a future or contingent use are excluded until they come in esse, and then the statute executes them also, if no alteration be of the estate of the land before.

And if cestuy que use in tail, with divers uses in remainder, had made a feoffment, and died before the statute, no execution should have been of this right of an use until entry by the feoffees.

So if cestuy que use in possession had made a feoffment before the statute, no right of the use in possession or remainder shall be executed by the statute until the regrefs by the feoffees.

So if a feoffment had been made before the statute to the use of the feoffee for life, and after to the uses of others in remainder, and the feoffee had made a feoffment in fee to another; this use shall not be re-continued, or the re-possession of the land executed unto it by this statute; so that the right of uses in esse, and uses in contingency until they happen to be in esse, remain at the common law as they were before the statute.

And therefore if the estate of the feoffees be in such cases devested by disseisin; or the king, or a corporation, or an alien, or a person attainted, &c. be infeoffed of the land before the use come in esse; or if the land be aliened bona fide upon consideration to one who has not notice of the use, this use can never be executed until these possessions be removed by lawful entry or action of the feoffees; and if their entry or action be barred, the use is gone for ever.

And therefore if cestuy que use in tail, the remainder in tail restrained with a clause of perpetuity be disseised, no use in contingency can be executed by this statute.

And if before the statute a feoffment had been made in fee to the use of J. S. for life, and after to the use of the right heirs of J. N. and the feoffees had been disseised, and then the statute had been made, and after J. N. dies, and after his death J. S. dies; this use shall never be executed in the right heir of J. N. Co. 126, 136. Plow. 391. Dyer 58. 88. 330.

And so also if a disseisin be after the statute, and before the death of J. N. no possession shall be executed in the right heir of J. N.

Also uses that need no execution by the statute, as when a man conveys land to J. S. and his heirs, to the use of J. S. and his heirs; this needs not the help of this statute.

Also uses that are against the rules of the common law shall not be executed by this statute; and therefore,

If a feoffment be made to the use of A. for life, and after to the use of every person that shall be his heir, one after another for term of his life: so if one makes a feoffment to the use of another in tail, with remainders over, with a proviso that neither of them shall discontinue or alien, &c. these uses shall not be executed, because the limitations are wholly void; and in these cases there is no remedy in chancery against the feoffees.

So from all this it appears, that some uses are executed presently, as uses in esse, and some are executed by matter ex post facto, if they be according to law, and come in esse in due time; but if they be uses invented and limited in a new manner, and not according to the ancient common law, they are altogether void, and extinguished and abolished by the statute.

And where lands are conveyed to others in trust after this or the like manner, viz. that the feoffees shall take the profits, and deliver them to the feoffor and his heirs, &c. or that the feoffees shall convey it to the heir of the feoffor at his age of twenty-one years.

And where lands are conveyed to certain uses expressed and declared, and there be other secret uses and intents agreed upon between the parties; these uses or trusts are not within this statute, neither will the statute execute them, but they remain as they were before the statute, determinable in chancery: also leases for years of lands in use that have their being before, and are granted over in use, are not executed by this statute. Co. 138.

And therefore if a lessee for years of land grants or assigns over his estate to A. and B. and their assigns, to the use of the grantor and his wife for the term of their lives; this use or trust is out of the statute, and not executed thereby; and therefore in this case all the estate is in A. and B. and the grantor has nothing but an use, for which he has his remedy in chancery.

So if one be seised of land in fee, and he bargains and sells it, or makes a lease of it to another in trust, and for the benefit of a third person; this is but a chancery trust, &c. in this third person, as was held clearly. M. 8 Car. B. R.

And yet if a feoffment be made to the use of J. S. and assigns for the term of twenty years, this term of years shall be executed by the statute.

And so in all such like cases and questions of trusts and uses that are not within the statute, the law is now as it was before the same statute was made, and all those matters are determinable in chancery; for as the questions of uses and trusts that are within the statute are to be decided and ruled by the judges of the common law; so are all other questions of uses and trusts that are out of the statute to be ruled and decided by the judges of chancery. Dyer 356. 369. Crompt. Jur. Co. 65.

(K) What shall be said a good Use of Land, or not; and when and where such an Use shall be raised, altered or created, or not.

First, In Respect of the Manner of raising it, and the several Ways whereby Uses may be raised.

TO make a good use, or make an use to rise, (for the rise of uses see Ld. Raym. 291.) especially such an use as may be within the statute, respect must be had to divers things:

I. To the ways or means of creating or raising of uses, wherein it is to be observed, that although the quality of the uses be changed in most cases by the statute of uses, yet uses, and uses within this statute, are and may be raised as they might before the statute, either by transmutation of the estate; as by fine, feoffment, common recovery, &c. or out of the estate of the owner of the land; as by bargain and sale, by deed indented and inrolled, or by covenant to stand seised to uses upon good consideration: and therefore a fine, feoffment, or recovery, may be had of land, to the use and intent that either of the parties thereunto, or others, shall have it for any time or estate; and by this means what uses, and consequently what estates a man will, may be raised and created: and in these cases the conusor, feoffor or recoverer, may appoint the use of the same fine, feoffment or recovery, to whom he will, without any respect of marriage, money, kindred or the like; for in this case his will guides the equity of the estate. Co. Lit. 271. Plow. 301.

Or if a man makes a lease to A. for life, to the use of B. for life; this is a good use and estate in B. during the life of A. Dyer 186.

Or if a man by bargain and sale for good consideration sells his land to another; hereby the use will rise according to the estate bargained and sold unto the bargainee; but in this case, if it be an estate of freehold, as of fee-simple, fee-tail, or for life, that is sold, the bargain and sale must be made by deed indented and inrolled within six months after, in some of the courts at Westminster, or in the sessions rolls in the shire where the land lieth, except it be in cities and corporate towns where they use to inrol deeds; otherwise no use will arise by it; but if it be an estate for years only that is sold, there the use will arise well enough without any such matter.

Or if a man seised of land in fee covenants to stand seised of it to the use of his wife, children, brethren, or other kindred, for life, in fee-simple or fee-tail; or if one seised of land in fee-simple, covenants to stand seised of the use of a woman he is to marry, or to the use of a woman, his son or other kinsman is to marry; hereby the uses, and consequently the estates, will rise accordingly; and in these cases there is no need it should be by deed indented, &c. or that the deed be inrolled, for uses may be raised by deed poll as well as by deed indented. 6 Co. 68. Dyer 155. 2 Co. 35, 36. 7 Co. 40. 8 Co. 95, 94. 4 Co. 17.

Also uses may be created (as some hold) by word or parol agreement as well as by deed or writing; for it is said it has been adjudged, that if a man says to his son and a woman that his son is to marry, that in consideration of the same marriage they shall have the land to them two in tail; that hereby a good estate-tail will arise after the marriage.

And that where one by word without deed grants land to his son and to his wife in tail, in consideration of their marriage; that it was agreed by all the judges that the use did rise upon this agreement. Crompt. Jur. Co. 60, 61. Plow. 301. 308. and see the better opinions of the judges in Corbin's case, 38 Eliz.

Howsoever, it is more safe in these cases to do it by deed and in writing; for Dyer 296. Plow. 12. seems to oppose this; and if a man makes a feoffment, levies a fine, or suffers a recovery to the use of his last will, or to the intent to perform his last will, or to the use of such person and persons, and of the estate and estates as he shall limit by his last will, and then afterwards by his last will declares the uses; these are good uses, and this is a good way of raising uses.

So if a man devises his land by will to J. S. and his heirs, to the use of J. D. and his heirs; it seems that the use will rise to J. D. and his heirs by this means.

And if a man by a verbal agreement, in consideration of money, or the like, sells his land to another, or agrees and promises that the bargainee shall have it for any time howsoever; that hereby no use nor estate will arise (if it be a freehold that is sold) within the statute.

statute, because it is not by deed indented, &c. yet it seems a good use will arise at the common law, and that the bargainee shall have relief in equity for his purchase. Lit. § 462, 463. 6 Co. 17. Vide stat. 27 H. 8. of Uses, ante. Fitz. Devise 22. Dyer 229.

An use will not rise as an use upon an use at the common law, but it may be a trust in equity. 2. 1 Chan. Ca. 114.

If lands are limited by will to A. in trust for a feme covert, and that A. shall receive the rents, and pay and dispose of them to the feme, or to such persons as she shall direct and appoint, without the intermeddling of her husband, &c. This is a trust only, and not an use executed by the statute. Vern. 415.

There are three ways of creating an use or trust remaining at common law, notwithstanding the stat. 27 H. 8. which ways are subject only to the controul and direction of the courts of equity.

First, Where a man seised in fee raises a term of years, and limits it in trust for A. &c. for this the statute cannot execute, the termor not being seised.

Secondly, Where lands are limited to the use of A. in trust to permit B. to receive the rents and profits; for the statute can only execute the first use.

Thirdly, Where lands are limited to trustees to receive and pay over the rents and profits to such and such persons; for here the lands must remain in them to answer these purposes. Abr. Ca. Eq. 383.

Secondly, In respect of the Persons trusted, and what Persons may not be seised to the Use of another, but to their own Use.

The second thing whereunto respect must be had, is to the persons trusted, or to him to whom the conveyance is made; for to every good use there must be a person seised to use, and he must be a person capable of such a seisin.

And as to this observe, that any sole person who may make an estate to himself, may make an estate to other uses.

Also a man may be seised of his own land to other uses, as in the case of covenant to stand seised to uses. Co. 122, 127, 135. Plow. 238. Dyer 8, 283.

But the king, or any body corporate, alien born, or person attaint, cannot be seised to other uses, no more by an original feoffment to use, than where they come by the land in use at the second hand; in which case (as hath been shewed) neither such persons, nor disseisors, abators or intruders, or lord of villains, or escheats, shall be seised to other uses; but in all these cases the uses are void, and the parties shall hold the land to their own uses, or to the uses of the feoffors, &c. and not to the use of cestuy que use. Resolved in Dr. Atkin's case, 44 C. 8 Vin. 249. pl. 3.

And a bargainee of land for valuable consideration cannot be seised of the land to any other use but his own. Dyer 155.

Thirdly, In respect of the Persons for whom the Trust is, or the Cestuy que Use.

The third thing to be respected is the cestuy que use; for to every good use, as there must be a person seised to use, so there must be a person to whose use he is seised, and he must be capable also. Co. 136.

And as to this observe, that any man that is capable of an estate directly or immediately to himself, is capable of the same estate by way of use: But if the use be limited to a corporation, there must be a licence had; otherwise it will be an alienation in mortmain. Mortmain 37.

And if future uses upon contingencies be limited to such persons as are not in being; these uses, howsoever they are good at common law, yet they are not good within the statute; neither does the statute execute them at all until they come in possession.

And if a feoffment be made to J. S. and his heirs to the use of the parishioners of Dale; this use is void; for they are incapable by this name, and it shall be to the use of feoffor. 2 H. 7. 27. 49 E. 3, 4.

Fourthly, In respect of the Estate and Possession of him that creates the Use.

The fourth thing to be regarded, is the estate of him that raises the uses in the land whereof the use is raised; for howsoever the tenant in fee-simple of land may create what uses he will in fee, for life or years upon it, and such uses are good; and the tenants in tail or for life may, perhaps, grant their land for their own lives to the use of a third person.

Yet if a tenant in tail for good consideration covenants to stand seised to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of his eldest son in tail; no use will arise by this covenant.

So if tenant in tail of an advowson in gross grants it by deed to one and his heirs, to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of another in fee; this grant is void by the death of the tenant in tail. Hil. 38 Eliz. C. B. 2 Co. 52. Pas. 13 Jac. C. B. Say v. Smith.

And if such tenant in tail bargains and sells his land by deed indented and inrolled; hereby the bargainee has an estate descendible to his heirs, but determinable upon the death of the tenant in tail.

And if such a tenant in tail bargains and sells his land by deed indented and inrolled; hereby the bargainee has an estate descendible to his heirs, but determinable upon the death of the tenant in tail. 10 Co. 96.

And if one covenants by indenture to stand seised to the use of B. of Whiteacre, which he has not then, but he afterwards purchases it; by this no use will arise. Yelverton's case, 37 Eliz. B. R. 22 Vin. 216, 217. pl. 5, 6.

And if one who has but a term of years grants it to J. S. to the use of himself for life, &c. This is no good use within the statute, but a chancery-trust only. Dyer 369.

Fifthly, In respect of the Estate and Possession of him that takes by the Conveyance.

The fifth thing to be respected, is the estate of him that takes by the conveyance out of which the uses are derived; for

Where a man grants in fee-simple to another and his heirs, he may limit what uses he will upon this estate.

And if a man makes an estate for life to another, he may limit an use thereupon; yet if a man makes a gift in tail to another, he can limit no use thereupon: And therefore if one grant his land to J. S. and the heirs of his body, to the use of J. S. and his heirs in fee; this limitation of use is void, and J. S. has hereby an estate in tail. Vide 2 Co. 76. Co. Lit. 19.

And if a feoffment be made to J. S. to have and to hold to him and the heirs of his body, to the use of him, his heirs and assigns for ever; this use is void. Trin. 14 Jac. B. R. Casper and Franklin's case. 22 Vin. 181.

And where one bargains and sells land for money, (in which case the law makes an express use) no other use can be appointed.

And therefore if A. for money bargains and sells land to B. and his heirs, to the use of A. for life, and after of B. in tail, and after of A. in fee; all these uses are void, for an use cannot rise out of an use.

So if A. makes a lease to B. for years, rendering rent, to have and to hold to the use of the lessor; this use is void, as being also against reason. Dyer 169. Cromp. Jur. 33. Lit. § 284.

And if a feoffee to use before the statute of uses, had bargained and sold the land to one who had notice of the former use; no use had been made hereby, for there might not be two uses in being of the same land at one time.

And if A. infeoffs B. to the use of C. and his heirs, with proviso that if D. pays to C. 100*l.* that C. and his heirs shall stand seised to the use of D. and his heirs; this last use is void, for the use must arise out of the estate of the feoffee, and not out of the estate of the cestuy que use. Dyer 255. Co. 136, 137.

A rent shall (by virtue of the statute) arise out of the estate of cestuy que use, upon a recovery, which was to arise out of the estate of the recoveror and his possession; because by the intention of the parties the cestuy que use was to pay the rent. Vaugh. 52.

An use cannot arise out of an use, or a way or a common newly created. Carter 46. Cr. Jac. 189, 190. pl. 13. Poph. 81.

Where an estate in use is to begin on a contingent precedent, which is impossible, or against law, the use shall never rise. Leon. 199.

Sixthly, In respect of the Cause or Consideration of an Use, and what shall be a sufficient Consideration to raise or alter an Use, or not.

The sixth thing, whereunto respect must be had, is the cause or consideration; for howsoever in cases where uses pass by the way of transmutation of possession, as by fine, feoffment or recovery, there the consideration is not at all material; for he that makes the estate may appoint the use to whom he will, without any respect to marriage, kindred, money, or other thing; for in this case his own will and consideration guides the use and equity of the estate; yet in bargains and sales, and covenants to stand seised to uses, it is otherwise; for there a consideration is so necessary that nothing will pass, neither will any use rise without it, i. e. some matter that may be a cause or occasion meritorious, which amounts to a mutual recompence in deed or in law; which must be expressed or implied in the deed whereby the use is created, or else supplied by averment and proof.

For howsoever in this case an averment shall not be allowed and taken against a deed, that there was no consideration given when there is an express consideration upon the deed; yet when the deed expresseth no consideration, or saith (for divers good considerations) or the like, there an averment of a good consideration given shall be received; for this is an averment that may stand with the deed, and without consideration inrolment will not help.

And therefore if one bargains and sells his land to another by deed indented and inrolled without any consideration, it seems no use will rise by this to the bargain. Co. 176. 11 Co. 5. Dyer 146, 169, 312. Cromp. Jur. Co. 62.

So if one (for divers good causes and considerations, or for divers great and valuable considerations) bargains and sells his land to another, or covenants to stand seised of his land to the use of another that is not of his kindred; no use will rise by this, unless it be proved that money, or something else, was given for it. 41 Eliz. adjudged.

But if a man by deed, in consideration of money, as in consideration of the sum of 100*l.* to him paid, or in consideration of a competent sum of money to him paid, or otherwise promised to be paid, or in consideration of other land, or of giving of counsel, or the like, bargains and sells, or by such like words grants his land to another in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life or years; in these cases the use will arise to the bargain well enough. Plow. 301. Bro. Fast. inrol. 9. Doct. & Stud. 99. c. 28. Cromp. Jur. Co. 60, 61. Dyer 90.

And therefore if I covenant with B. that, when he infeoffs me of Whiteacre, I will stand seised of Blackacre to the use of him and his heirs, and he infeoffs me accordingly; in this case the use of Blackacre will rise to B. and he and his heirs shall have it according to the agreement. Cromp. Jur. 61.

So if I agree with my lessee for years, that if he pays me 100*l.* within his term, that I will stand seised of the land to the use of him and his heirs, and he pays me the 100*l.* accordingly; in this case the use will rise, and he and his heirs shall have it according to the agreement.

So if I covenant that my son shall marry the daughter of A. and A. promises to give me 100*l.* for the marriage-portion, and I covenant that if the same marriage do not take effect, and my heirs will stand seised of the land to the use of A. and his heirs, until the 100*l.* be paid; in this case a good use will rise of the land accordingly, if the marriage do not take effect; but in all these and such like cases the covenant must be by deed indented, and it must be inrolled, otherwise no use will arise. Bro. Exposition of Words 44.

And when the deed is inrolled, it shall take effect as from the beginning by relation to avoid intervenient estates and charges whatsoever.

And in like manner it is, if one for no cause, or for no consideration, as [because he is of ancient acquaintance, or because there has been entire love or great familiarity between them, or because he has been his chamber-fellow, school-fellow, or fellow-servant, or because he has done him good service, or because he was his master and taught him, or to the end that he may pay his debts and legacies, and discharge his funeral expences, or for divers good uses and considerations]; if one for any of these, or any such like cause and consideration, covenants with another that he will stand seised of his land to the use of that other and his heirs, or that he and his heirs shall have the land, &c. by this covenant, whether it be inrolled or not, no use at all will rise. Plow. 302. 21 H. 7. 20.

So if one covenants to stand seised to the use of J. S. (who is a bastard son) and his heirs, no use will arise thereby; and yet, perhaps, upon such a covenant as this, whereupon no use or estate arises, an action of covenant may lie. Dyer 374.

But if one [in consideration of nature, kindred, blood or marriage with one's self, or any other blood, payment of debts, or for the like cause] or without any such express consideration deration at all, covenants to stand seised to the use of himself, his wife, children, brothers, sisters or cousins, or their wives; these are good considerations, and the uses and estates thereupon thus raised and made are good.

And therefore if one covenants by his deed, without expression of any consideration, to stand seised of his land to the use of himself for life, and after of his wife for life, and after of his child in tail or for life, and after of his brother in tail or for life, or in fee, or in any such like manner; these uses will arise, and the estates will be well made hereby accordingly. 7 Co. 11. 10 Co. 143. Co. 83, 154. Plow. 801. Lit. § 284.

So if I agree with another, that if he marries my daughter, that from the time of the marriage they shall have my land to them and their heirs; in this case, and by this agreement, if he marries my daughter, they will have my land according to the agreement.

So if I being about to marry with a woman, covenant with J. S. to stand seised of my land to the use of myself for life, and after to the use of the woman I am to marry, for her life, and after to the use of the heirs of my body begotten on her; these are good uses and estates that are made by this covenant. Plow. 301. Bro. Feoffment al' Uses 54.

But here by the way this difference must be observed, where a man covenants, in consideration of a marriage to be had, to stand seised to use, and the marriage doth not take effect, there no use shall arise. Cur', T. 10 Car. B. R. Hoskin's case.

So also if the parties disagree at their age of consent; and so was it held in the lord Herbert's case.

But where one covenants to make a feoffment, or levy a fine to such uses, and the feoffment is made, or fine levied accordingly; there notwithstanding the marriage does not take effect, yet the use shall arise; for there he is in by the fine or feoffment, in which case there needs no consideration.

And therefore if A. covenants with B. that in consideration C. is his kinsman, and in consideration of a marriage to be had between C. and E. he will make a feoffment and other assurances to the use of himself for life, the remainder to C. and E. and the heirs of their two bodies, and after assurances are made accordingly by fine or feoffment, but they do not intermarry, but marry others; in this case notwithstanding E. shall have a moiety of the land.

So if I covenant (in consideration of the love I bear to my wife) to stand seised to the use of her and her heirs of my body upon her begotten, and after to the use of my brother; hereby the use will rise to my brother also, although he be not within the express consideration.

So if one covenants with his two sons, for the love he bears to them, to stand seised of his land to the use of himself for life, and after his wife for life, and after of his two sons in tail, one after another; in this case the consideration is sufficient to raise the use to the husband and wife also. 7 Co. 40. 11 Co. 24. Dyer 374.

So if one (in consideration of the love he bears to his brother) covenants to stand seised to the use of his brother, and the wife of his brother for life, or in tail; in this case the consideration is sufficient to raise the uses to them both.

So if I covenant (in consideration of the marriage of my son with the daughter of another) to stand seised to the use of myself for life, and after of my son and his wife in tail; these are good uses, and will rise accordingly. Plow. 307.

If I covenant with J. S. to stand seised to the use of him, his executors, &c. (he being none of my kindred) for twenty years, and after to the use of my son in tail; in this case the use will not rise to J. S. but it will rise to my son well enough.

For although the consideration of money given by one may be a consideration to all the estates, yet the consideration of blood, &c. is singular, and will raise the use of that only to which it goes.

But if I covenant with B. in consideration of the marriage of my son with the daughter of B. to stand seised to the use of R. (a stranger) for life, and after to the use of my son and his wife in tail; in this case the use shall rise to R. although he be a stranger, and that for the supportance of the remainder, which cannot be without a particular estate; and in all these and in such like cases no inrolment of the deed is necessary. Plow. 307. Dyer 174.

If I (in consideration of 10l. given to me by my son) covenant with him to stand seised of land to the use of him and his heirs; in this case no use will rise without inrolment by the implied consideration, because there is an express consideration; Et expressum facit cessare tacitum. 11 Co. 24, 25. 7 Co. 40.

And yet if I covenant, that in consideration that J. S. is my son, and hath paid me 10l. that I will stand seised of the land to the use of him and his heirs; in this case the use will rise without inrolment.

And if I covenant (in consideration of 100*l.* and of a marriage) to stand seised to the use of myself for life, and after of my son in tail; hereby the use is raised, and the possession charged without inrolment. Maurel's case. T. 3 Jac. B. R. Plow. 4. Bro. Feoffment al' Uses 15.

So also where a feoffment is made, fine levied, or recovery suffered, and no use declared thereupon, and the same is without any consideration of fine or rent; by this the use is not changed; for it results to the feoffor, conusor and recoverer, and he hath the estate as he had it before; but if in these and such like cases there be but a penny or a pennyworth of consideration given, or any rent reserved upon the feoffment, the use will rise well enough to the feoffee, &c.

And if any tenure be created, as where a gift in tail, lease for life or years is made; in these cases, although there be no consideration given, yet the use will rise well enough to the donee or lessee, and especially if any rent be reserved, for that is a kind of consideration: but if a lessee for years grants over his term to another without any consideration at all, it seems by this no use at all will rise to the grantee, and therefore that the grantee shall hold it to the use of the grantor; sed quere. Co. 24. Doct. & Stud. 97. c. 26. 99. 101. 28. &c.

If uses are limited without consideration, they are void; and the estate returns to the covenantor again, or rather was never out of him. 1 Vent. Pibus and Midford. Mod. 159. 60. &c.

There are no considerations at this day to raise uses upon covenants but natural love and affection, which is for advancement of blood, or consideration of marriage, which is joining of blood and marriage together: other considerations, as money for land, or land for land; though the words are stand seised to uses, yet they are bargains and sales, and without inrolment they will raise no use. Carter 139. Vide 1 Leon. 138. to 201.

If I covenant that A. a stranger shall have my land to him and his heirs to pay my debts and legacies; the same is by way of bargain and sale, and nothing passes without inrolment. 1 Leon. 201.

Seventhly, In respect of the Manner and Frame of the Words used in raising of Uses, and what Manner of Uses may be made or not.

The seventh thing whereunto respect is to be had, is the manner and form of words used in the making and raising of uses, wherein there is much regard to the mind and intention of the parties: for,

If one covenants in consideration of 20*l.* paid him by J. S. to stand seised of land to the use of J. S. and his heirs; or if one covenants that J. S. and his heirs shall have his land; if this deed be inrolled, this is a good bargain and sale to raise the use, and will do it as well as when it is made by the words bargain and sell. 8 Co. 94.

So if one for good consideration, by the words demise and grant, makes a lease of his land for a term of years; hereby the use will rise to the lessee as well as if the lease were made by the words bargain and sell, & sic de similibus.

And yet if one by the words bargain and sell, conveys his land to his son, no use will rise by this, except there be money paid, and the deed be inrolled.

And if one in consideration of money grants his land to his son, or any other, by the word infeoff, no use will rise by this unless livery of seisin be made thereupon, because the intent of the parties in these cases appears to be to pass it in another manner.

And if in the last case livery and seisin be made, then the use shall be guided by law, that is, if nothing be given, it shall be to the use of the feoffee, and not amount to a limitation of use to the son. Wards v. Lambert, C. B. Pas. 37 Eliz. Stile's case. Vide 2 Co. 101. and Hayward's case.

If one covenants with his son that his land shall remain, or that his land shall descend to his son; this is a good covenant to raise the use according to the limitation.

And yet if one covenants with his son upon his marriage, that his land shall remain, remain or descend to his son in fee, or in fee-tail; by this no use will be raised, because it is so certain; but, perhaps, this may amount to a covenant, whereupon the son may have an action of covenant.

If I covenant for me and my heirs, that I and my heirs, and all others that are or shall be thereof seised to the use of, &c. this is a good covenant to raise the use, although it be in words of the future tense. 21 H. 7. 18. Plow. 301. 308. Bro. Feoffment Use 16.

If I covenant with my eldest son, and strangers, to convey my land to the same strangers, to the use of myself for life, and after of my son in tail, &c. and I grant by the deed, that the said persons seised of the said land shall be from thence seised to the said uses, and no other use, and no other conveyance is made; it seems this is sufficient to raise the use.

And yet if I be seised of land in fee, and covenant with J. S. that A. B. and C. D. and their heirs, shall stand and be seised of this land to the use of, &c. it seems this is not a good covenant to raise the uses. Dyer 874.

If a feoffment or other conveyance be made to the use of the feoffor and the heirs of his body, on the body of M. the wife of S. T. and for default of such issue, to the use of him and the heirs of his body of S. the now wife of W. K. and for default of such issue, then to the use and performance of his last will for ten years immediately after his death, and after the term ended, to the use of the feoffees and their heirs during the life of W. (eldest son of the feoffor) and after his death, to the use of the first issue male of the body of the feoffor lawfully begotten, and the heirs of the body of such first issue male; and for default of such first issue male, to the second issue male, &c. (in the same manner) these are good limitations of uses. Co. 120.

So if an use be limited to J. S. for life without impeachment of waste, and after to the use of B. and C. their executors and administrators, for the term of twenty years, and after to the use of C. and the heirs male of his body, &c. these are good uses. Co. 90.

So if an use be limited after this manner, viz. to the use of a man's last will and testament; or to the use of such person or persons, and of such estate and estates as he shall limit and appoint by his last will and testament; or to the use of such person or persons, or to such uses and purposes as he shall by any writing under his hand and seal declare and appoint; these are good limitations. 6 Co. 18. Lit. § 462, 463.

If I covenant with another in consideration of blood, &c. that I will stand seised of my land to the use of such of my sons, or such of my cousins, as the covenantee shall name; in this case, after a nomination made, the use will rise well enough.

But if I (for and in consideration of 10*l.* or the like good consideration) covenant to stand seised of land to the use of such persons as the covenantee shall name; in this case, although the covenantee nominates some of my cousins, or blood, yet no use will rise by this for the incertainty of it.

If a feoffment or other conveyance be to the use of J. S. and his heirs, provided that if the feoffor pays 10*l.* at such a day, that then it shall be to the use of the feoffor and his heirs; this is a good limitation, and the use will rise accordingly. Co. 176.

An use may be limited to a woman durante viduitate sua, and this is good. 4 Co. 3.

If a man be seised of two manors, and covenants to stand seised of the same to the uses following, viz. of the one to the use of the covenantor for his life, and after to the use of his wife for life, and after to the use of his eldest son in tail, &c. and for the other manor, to the use of the second son in tail, &c. these are good limitations, and the uses will rise accordingly. 11 Co. 23.

If a man seised of land in fee, agrees with another that a fine shall be levied of it, and that the same shall be to the uses following, viz. that J. S. (the conusor) shall have one yearly rent of 50*l.* during his life, to be issuing out of the same land; and as touching the land charged with the rent, &c. to the use of J. D. (the conusee) until default of payment of the said yearly rent, and then to the use of J. S. and his heirs for ever; this is a good limitation, and the use will rise accordingly; et sic de similibus. 2 Co. 69, 70.

If a feoffment be made by J. S. to the uses in certain indentures tripartite of the same date, and therein is declared that it shall be to the use of A. for life without impeachment of waste, and after to the use of such farmers or tenants to whom he shall demise any part of the premises for life or lives, or for any term of years, as in any such demise shall be limited and appointed, and after to the use of the performance of the last will of the said J. and to the use of such person or persons severally to whom the said J. by his last will and testament shall appoint any estate, and after to the use of, &c. these are good uses; and the estate shall rise accordingly. 10 Co. 78.

An use may be limited upon condition, and the condition may be annexed to one of the uses, and not unto another. 4 Co. 24.

If lands be conveyed to J. S. and the heirs of his body, to the use of J. S. and his heirs, or to the use of a stranger and his heirs; this use will not rise in this manner.

And yet if lands be conveyed to J. S. and his heirs, to the use of him and the heirs male of his body, and after to the use of a stranger and his heirs; it seems this is a good limitation. Co. Lit. 19.

If one grants lands by deed to husband and wife, to have and to hold to the use of the husband and wife, and of the heirs of their two bodies; this is a good estate-tail by the limitation.

limitation, although he does not say habendum to them and their heirs, &c. but habendum to their uses; but it would be otherwise if the uses were limited to a stranger in this manner. Adjudged H. 6 Car. B. R.

If lands be conveyed by J. S. to J. D. to the use of J. S. or to the use of his wife for life, or to the use of any other for life, the remainder to another in tail or for life, the remainder to a third, his executors, &c. for six months, and after the six months ended, to the use of a fourth and his heirs; these are good limitations, and the estates will rise accordingly.

If an use be limited to the conusee of a fine, or a recoveror in a recovery until he makes a lease for forty years, and after to the use of the recoverees or conusors and their heirs; this is a good limitation, and the use will rise accordingly. Dyer 290.

Contingent uses, or uses in posse, may be created as well as uses in esse; and therefore if lands be conveyed to the use of a man and the wife he shall afterwards marry, or to the use of his first, second or third wife, or to the use of J. S. for life, and after to the use of the right heirs of J. D. and J. D. is then living; or to the use of J. S. for life, and after to the use of him that shall be his first heir male, and the heirs of the body of such heir male, &c. all these and such like are good uses; but they are uses at the common law still, and are not executed by the statute until they come in esse. Co. 135. in Cbudleigh's case.

Eighthly, In respect of the Nature and Quality of the Use.

The last thing whereunto respect is to be had, is the nature and quality of the use.

And herein observe, that a man may at this day by act executed in his life-time, or by his last will and testament at his death, give his lands, tenements or hereditaments to any person or persons not corporate, and their heirs, for any religious, charitable or civil use, as well as for any private use.

And therefore a man may so dispose of his lands for the finding of a preacher, erecting or maintenance of a school, relief and comfort of maimed soldiers, sustenance of poor people, reparations of churches, highways, bridges, discharging of the poor inhabitants of a village of the common charges, to make a stock for poor labourers in husbandry, and poor apprentices; and for the marriage of poor virgins, or other such like uses; and these uses are not prohibited by any statute.

And it is good policy upon every such feoffment or estate to reserve to the feoffor and his heirs some small rent, or to set down some small consideration.

But these uses are not such uses as are executed by the statute of uses, neither are they to be resembled to the uses aforesaid; for in these cases if there be any misemployment of the lands, or breach of the trust by the parties trusted, redress is to be had by the lord chancellor by a special course of proceeding: For which see the statutes of 39 Eliz. c. 6. 43 Eliz. c. 9. Jac. c. 3. Co. 26. 8 Co. 131. 4 Co. 113.

Dr. Downham having given several lands to charitable uses, for the maintenance of a master and usher of a free-school, &c. and they being incorporated; in consideration of a small fine, and surrender of a former lease, granted a long term of years in the lands to W. R. at a great value: This was found by inquisition, upon a commission of charitable uses; whereupon the lease was set aside, and the lessee decreed to deliver up the possession, and pay the arrears of rent according to the full value. Vern. 415.

Charitable uses.

No agreement of parishioners, where there are parochial charities given to certain uses, alter or direct them to other uses; for if they might change and apply the charities as they thought fit, it would be a great step towards destroying all charities.

A corporation for a charity are but trustees, and may improve the same, but cannot do anything to the prejudice thereof, or in breach of the rules of the founder. Vern. 42, 44. Vern. 412.

Money given to a parish generally, without saying to what use, was decreed to the poor of the parish, on the minister, churchwardens and overseers of the poor exhibiting a bill in exhibition of petition, and suggesting that the testator intended it for the benefit of the poor. It was objected against this decree, that the devise was void, there being no use limited touching the same, whether it was for the poor, or for the repair of the church or highways, &c. Chan. 134, 135. Vide Abr. Ca. Eq. 97, 98.

The statute 9 Geo. 2. c. 36. restrains and makes void the disposition of lands, or sums of money, &c. to be laid out in lands to charitable uses, unless it be by deed indented and executed before two witnesses twelve months before the death of the donor, and inrolled.

Vol. III.

4 E

But

But this act is not extended to the two universities, or the colleges of Eaton, Winchester, or Westminster.

The devise of a charity not good at law, by reason of the misnaming of the devisee, &c. has been held a good limitation in equity, within the statute of charitable uses; which statute supplies all defect of assurance, where the donor is of capacity to dispose: and legacies given to charitable uses are more favourably construed than all others. Finch's Rep. 221. Vern. 230. 2 Vern. 755. Abr. Ca. Eq. Tit. Charity.

Pious uses.

Pious uses are wholly subject to the chancery.

And no appeal lies to the house of lords from a sentence by the delegates, or a decree of the lord chancellor, upon the statute of charitable uses.

Also the decree on hearing exceptions being once confirmed by the chancellor, there can be no rehearing, for that is final by the act of parliament. 2 Vern. 118. 2 Chan. Ca. 32.

Superstitious uses.

If any man has heretofore given, or hereafter shall give, any lands, tenements or hereditaments, by act executed in his life, or by his last will at his death, to any person singular or corporate, in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life or years, to the intent or upon condition to maintain any superstitious uses, as to find a chaplain, and have the service of a priest to say mass, or to have a priest or other man to pray for the soul of any dead man in such a church or other place; or to have or maintain perpetual obits, lamps or torches, &c. to be used at certain times to help to save the souls of men out of the supposed purgatory; all these and such like uses are void; and the lands that are so given to such superstitious uses, are to be forfeited, and given to the king, and he shall have them; and yet if so that there be any charitable use intermixed with the superstitious use, and they may be distinguished, the king shall have only so much as is given to the superstitious use, and not that which is given to the charitable use also: for which see Adams and Lambert's case at large. 4 Co. 104. & stat. 15 R. 3. c. 5. 37 H. 8. c. 4. 1 Ed. 6. c. 14.

A devise to superstitious uses, is where it is to find a priest to pray for the souls of the dead, &c. and the lands or goods so devised are forfeited to the king by the statute 1 Ed. 6.

But if land is given to find an obit, and for another good use; if there is no certainty how much shall be employed to the superstitious use, the gift to the good use shall preferre the whole from forfeiture. 2 Roll. 205. See 2 Vern. Rep. 266. Abr. Ca. Eq. Tit. Charity.

A lecture is not within the statute of 43 Eliz. of charitable uses, but that statute took pattern from 1 Ed. 6. c. 14. against superstitious uses, and here the charity is mistaken.

But where a gift is of 10 l. per ann. to maintain a superstitious use, so long as the law would allow it; when the law did abrogate that superstition, it was turned to a good use, and decreed to be, to maintain a catechist there, to be approved of by the bishop. 2 Chan. Ca. 18. Abr. Ca. Eq. Tit. Charity.

(L) Of Deeds declaring (or leading) the Uses of Feoffments, Fines or Recoveries.

AS to a declaration of uses, i. e. the manifestation or agreement of the parties to what uses and intents the assurance made shall be, observe these things:

First, On what Assurances Uses may be declared.

Uses may be declared or averred on a fine, feoffment, or recovery of land; but on a bargain and sale of land no use may be declared or averred, but what the law doth make.

And upon a covenant of uses, no other use may be declared or averred but what is contained within the deed. Co. 175, 176. Dyer 169.

Secondly, Of declaring the Use according to the Estate the Party has in the Land.

Every one may declare and dispose the use of land according to the estate he has in the land; for the declaration and disposition of the use ensues the ownership of the land sicut umbra sequitur corpus.

And at this day the use draws the land to it, as the body or principal the shadow necessary.

And therefore the owner of the land, or he from whom the land moves, ought to limit and declare the use of the land; as if the husband and wife levy a fine of the land whereof he is seised in the right of his wife, the husband alone may declare the use of this fine and this declaration shall bind the wife, although her assent to the limitation of the uses do not appear, if her dissent doth not appear; but in this case it is most proper to have a declaration of the uses by the husband and wife both; for she alone, because she is sub potestate viri, cannot alone declare or limit any use; neither can the husband alone limit any use against her good will, because he hath not the estate of the land.

And therefore if A. and B. his wife be seised of land in the right of his wife, and she without the consent of her husband covenants by indenture with C. and D. 14 Martii 14 Eliz. that a fine shall be levied of this land, and that it shall be to the use of herself for life without impeachment of waste, and after to the conusees for their lives, to the intent that they shall suffer J. S. to take the profits for his life, with divers remainders over; and afterwards, and before the fine levied, the husband alone by another indenture, 13 February 22 Eliz. (wherein the wife is named a party) without the consent of his wife, does agree that a fine shall be levied to the use of him and his wife, and after to the uses limited by the wife's indenture, and after the fine is levied accordingly, in this case, although the variance be in one particular only, and the limitations in all the rest of the uses and estates do agree, yet all the same limitations by both indentures are void, and the use upon the conveyance is left to construction of law, and therefore shall be to the wife and her heirs for ever.

And yet if the husband and wife agree in the limitation of the uses for part of the land, and differ in the rest, the limitations for so much as they agree in are good, and void for the residue.

And in these cases where the declaration is good, the wife and her heirs shall be bound by it.

So if two jointenants are, and they and two others, having several estates, join in a fine and one of them declares the use in one manner, and the other declares the use in another manner; this declaration is good for either of their parts, for the declaration shall be governed according to their estates.

And if an infant, or a man, de non sane memorie, declares the use of a fine levied by him; his declaration is good, and shall bind him so long as the fine shall continue in force. Co. 57. Dyer 290. Hughe's Abr. 802.

Husband and wife levied a fine of the lands of the wife, and he alone declared the uses of the fine; this shall bind the wife if her dissent does not appear; because it shall be intended that she did consent, if the contrary doth not appear; but if the husband declares one use and the wife another, they are both void, because the husband, though he is sui juris, hath no estate in the land, and the wife, though she hath the estate, yet she is not sui juris, but under the power of her husband; and in such case the use shall follow the ownership of the land. 2 Co. 89.

Thirdly, By what Deed Uses may be declared.

A declaration of uses may be made either by deed indented (which is the most usual and best way) or by deed-poll; as where the parties by such a writing agree that an assurance shall be made, or to be passed, shall be to such and such uses; as that a fine shall be levied by such time, and that it shall be to the use of one for life, another in tail, another in fee.

Or it may be made by a verbal agreement without any writing at all, (see the stat. 4 & 5 Hen. 8.) as where an agreement is so had and made between two or more, that a fine or recovery shall be had, and it shall be to such and such uses, and the same is had accordingly; in this case this is a sufficient declaration, being proved; but it is not safe in these cases to depend upon slippery memory. 2 Co. 73.

And the use of a fine may be declared by word without any deed: and if there be such declaration by parol made to lead the use of a fine, and it be defective to declare the intent of the parties, it may afterwards be supplied and made good by subsequent parols. Style's 148. Quere.

The uses of a fine may levied within the fine itself without any indenture. Hutt. 112. An use may be averred without a deed upon a fine sur render; for the deed is but to show the intent of the parties, which may appear as well without as by deed. Popb. 105. A general covenant shall direct the special uses of a fine, and the special operation thereof, according to the intent of the parties. Bulst. 256.

The render of a fine may not be alledged to any other use than what is expressed upon the fine without a writing to shew for it. Popb. 104, 105. 3 Bulst. 318, 319. A bargain and sale, fine and recovery made at several times to one purpose, shall be deemed but as one conveyance. Bendl. 101.

Fourthly, When a Declaration of Uses may be made.

A declaration of uses may be made before, at or after the time of making the assurance, for an indenture subsequent may direct and declare the uses of a fine precedent.

And therefore one may covenant or agree that J. S. shall recover against him, or that he will levy a fine, or make feoffment to J. S. of such land, and that they shall be to the use of, &c.

And if one makes a feoffment, he may declare the uses of it at the same time, and that within the same or in another deed, at his pleasure.

And if the assurance be past, and no declaration of uses had before or at the time of passing it, a declaration may be subsequent, viz. that the same assurance was and shall be, and the recoverors, &c. shall stand and be seised to such and such uses; for an indenture subsequent may direct and declare the uses of a fine or recovery precedent; but observe these differences, that when precedent indentures are made to direct the uses of a subsequent assurance, and after the assurance is made accordingly, there no averment shall be taken by word, that the same assurance was to other uses than are declared by the indenture.

But against an indenture subsequent, declaring the uses of an assurance precedent, an averment may be taken, that there were other uses expressed and limited before or at the time of the assurance than those which are contained in the indenture.

If a precedent indenture be made to direct the uses of a subsequent assurance, when the assurance comes the land is bound, and the conusor or recoverer cannot by any act of his, after the recovery had, charge or avoid it; but if the declaration be subsequent, if in the interim, between the assurance had and the declaration of the uses, the conusor or recoverer sells, gives or charges the land to others, this subsequent declaration will not subvert the mean estates, charges or interests, unless it can be otherwise proved, that by a certain and compleat agreement of the parties, the assurance was had and made to these uses. 2 Co. 69, 70. 6 Co. 27, 63. 7 Co. 40. 9 Co. 8. Dyer 136, 290.

By the statute of 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. § 15. Declaration of uses or trusts by deed made after fines and recoveries, shall be good in law, notwithstanding the 29th of Car. 2. c. 3. which requires writing to pass estates at the very time of conveyance.

When an agreement for the limitation of uses is precedent, whether it be by writing or word, it is but directory, and does not bind the estate until the same assurance be afterwards had, and therefore by a new agreement or declaration made in the same manner as the former, viz. in writing, if the former be so, and between the same parties either before or at the time of the same assurance passed, new uses may be made and the former uses changed; but when the same assurance is pursued accordingly, and no intervenient alteration made, it shall be expounded to be to the same uses, and shall bind the parties, and no naked averment shall be received of any latter or other agreement contrary to the indentures.

Where an indenture precedent is to limit the uses of a subsequent fine or recovery, and it is not pursued in some circumstance of time, person, quantity or the like; yet if no other new mean agreement may be proved, the assurance shall be in judgment of law to the uses contained in the same indenture; but if a variance be in these particulars, and the form of the indenture be not pursued, there an averment without writing may be taken, that the fine or other assurance was to other uses than are contained in the indenture; and if none such can be made, then it is left to the construction of law.

And therefore if A. be seised of divers manors in fee, and by his indenture dated 10 March 21 Eliz. covenants with B. and C. that he before the end of Trinity term next will by fine or other conveyance assure one of these manors to them, and that the same assurance shall be to the use of A. and E. his wife, and of the heirs of A. and the 28th day the deed is enrolled; and the 29th day of the same month he by another indenture covenants with the same C. and D. to convey all the same manors to the same C. and D. before the Annunciation next, and that the same assurance shall be to the use of A. and the heirs-male of his body; and for default of such issue, to the use of divers others in remainder; and by this indenture covenants, that if he shall not sufficiently convey this land by the day, that he will stand seised to the same uses, &c. and no fine is levied by the end of Trinity term, but 17 September following a note of a fine is acknowledged to B. and C. and the heirs of B. of the land within the first indenture; and the 18th of the same month another note of a fine is acknowledged acknowledged to C. and D. of the same and other land in the last indenture, and both these fines are entered in ostabis Mich. following; in this case these fines cannot be directed and declared by both indentures, and therefore it seems these declarations are void. 2 Co. 69, 70. 6 Co. 27, 63. 7 Co. 40. 9 Co. 8. Dyer 136. 290.

Where a man makes a feoffment to such uses as he shall appoint in his last will, there the use and estate vests in the feoffee, and the last will is directory. Co. Lit. 111. b.

Sixthly, Of the Certainty of the Declaration of Uses.

A declaration of the uses must be certain, and especially in three things:

(1) In the person to whom; (2) In the lands, &c. of which, and (3) In the estates by which the uses are declared; and if there want certainty in either of these, the declaration is not good; and it must be compleat of itself without any reference to indentures, or other writings to be made afterwards; for then it is but an imperfect communication, and no compleat declaration.

Where the uses of a fine are agreed, there it must go to the uses agreed upon; but where no uses are agreed upon, but only that it is agreed a fine shall be levied, and not said to what use, or a fine is levied; there the law appoints the use according to conscience. 2 Co. 37. 38. Dyer 18. Co. Lit. 271. Moor 472, 473. 842, 843.

More acres of land do not pass by a fine than the fine names, although the indenture to lead the use of it speaks of more acres; for the fine is the foundation of the estate, and the estate riseth out of it. Jenk. Cent. 6. case 45.

If the conferee of a fine levied of land pays money to the confisor of the fine at the time of the fine levied, and there be no use declared, nor is it set forth to what use it shall be: in this case the law will construe the fine to be levied of these lands to the use of the conferee to whom the fine is levied.

But if there be no money paid by the cognisee, nor any use declared, it shall be to the use of the cognisor who levied the fine; for nothing appears whereby it can be supposed that the parties had any intention the estate in the lands should be altered by the fine, but that the fine was levied in corroboration of the title of the cognisor. Bendl. 134, 135. Styles's Pract. Reg. 147.

One seised in fee as heir of the mother's side levies a fine, and declares the use thereof to himself in fee; this is the old use, and there is no diversity between an express declaration of an use, and an implied one. 2 Will. 139.

If a recovery declared by a precedent deed must be confessed and avoided, uses declared by a subsequent deed may be traversed. Ld. Raym. 155, 289.

Uses of a recovery declared by a subsequent deed ought to be directly averred. Lord Raym. 155.

Uses will not arise by parol. Ld. Raym. 160.

Where uses will arise without deed. Ld. Raym. 290.

The uses of a deed precedent to a fine cannot be controverted by a parol evidence, unless there be a variance in the description of the fine. Ld. Raym. 155, 289.

Notwithstanding a variance between the deed and the fine, yet the fine is by construction of law to the uses of the deed, if nothing appears to the contrary. Ld. Raym. 289.

Infancy or coverture cannot be alledged against a deed which leads the uses of a fine. Ld. Raym. 289.

A deed of husband and wife, that all agreements relating to such lands shall cease, will not revoke a former deed leading the uses of a future fine, unless there be a variance. Ld. Raym. 289.

Where a fine varies from the description of a former deed a new deed will lead the uses. Ld. Raym. 290.

What deed will lead the uses of a fine. Ld. Raym. 291.

A feoffment or release may be pleaded without shewing that they were to the use of the conferee, &c. 2 Ld. Raym. 801.

S. conveys to the use of himself for 99 years, if he so long live, remainder to A. for years, remainder to the heirs of the body of S. no use will result to S. for his life, and remainder to the heirs of his body is void. 2 Ld. Raym. 854.

An use arising out of the estate of a release to commence from the death of tenant in tail is not void. 2 Ld. Raym. 782.

Infant covenants to levy a fine, he may declare other uses when of age. Stra. 94.

A fine levied to the tenant of the præcipe in a recovery shall be intended to the use of the conusee. Stra. 17.

(M) Of Averment of Uses, or the Proof of Uses by Witnesses.

AS to averment of uses, i. e. the proof of uses by witnesses, observe these things: where any use is expressed upon charter of feoffment, no other use contra or præter the use which is expressed shall be admitted.

But in cases of fines and recoveries wherein no uses are expressed, other uses than what law-construction will make may be shewed and proved to be agreed upon, and the same assurances shall be to such uses as by proof shall be made to appear to be the intent of the parties; as,

If a man and his wife sell her land for money, and after levy a fine to the vendee and his heirs; in this case it may be averred it was for money, and this shall carry the use to the vendee without any declaration of use, which otherwise would result to the woman and her heirs; and yet if a fine be with a grant and render, no averment to prove it to be to other uses than what are contained in the fine shall be received. Doct. & Stud. 95. 2 Co. 57. 5 Co. 20, 25. 9 Co. 8.

And where the uses of a conveyance be declared by indenture before or at the time of the same conveyance, no averment shall be received of any other uses than what are contained in the indenture.

But if the indenture of declaration be subsequent, there an averment lieth and shall be received, that there were other uses agreed upon at or before the time of the conveyance made. 9 Co. 8.

And where an agreement is made to levy a fine, or suffer a recovery before or at a time certain, and that it shall be of such and such lands, and to such and such persons; and after it falleth out the fine or recovery is not had by that time, or not of the same land, or not between the same persons; in these cases an averment may be had of other uses, and of other agreement. 5 Co. 26.

No averment of uses by proof of witnesses shall be admitted against an use expressed in a fine; but in case where no use is expressed in a fine, there are other uses than what the law will make upon the fine may be averred and proved to be agreed upon, and the fine shall be to the uses, 5 Co. 26, 9, 8, 2, 57.

T. P. levied a fine, and afterwards suffered a common recovery, wherein the conusee of the fine was tenant to the præcipe, but no uses of the fine were declared; it was therefore insisted, that the uses of the fine resulted to the conusor, and though the intent might be to make him tenant to the præcipe, yet since the Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. there shall be no averment of an use or trust; but adjudged that at the common law the use of a fine was always intended to be in the conusee, and that this statute doth not extend to uses by operation of law, but to such uses as are to a third person, (i. e.) that neither the conusor or conusee of a fine shall aver the uses to be to a third person; so that in the principal case there was immediately in by the fine, and the cognisee was a good tenant to the præcipe. 2 Salk. 676.

(N) To what Use an Assurance of Land shall be by Construction of Law, and how the Limitation of the Uses of Land by a Deed shall be construed.

WH E R E the uses of an assurance are certainly agreed upon and declared between the parties thereto, there regularly it shall be to such uses as are declared and agreed upon, and to no others.

But if a conveyance be made of land by fine, feoffment or recovery, and no uses there declared and agreed upon, the law will limit and appoint the use according to equity and conscience.

And therefore if a man levies a fine, and makes a feoffment, or suffers a recovery of land without any consideration, the law will adjudge the use to be in the feoffor, or recoverer, who parts with the land.

And so if a man makes a feoffment to the intent to perform his last will, or to the use of his last will, or to such persons as he shall limit by his last will; in all these cases the use shall be in the feoffor and his heirs whilst he lives, to dispose of at his pleasure. Dott. & Stud. 95. Perk. § 533. Co. 24. Co. Lit. 271. Dyer 18. Crom. Jur. 62.

And so if one makes a feoffment of land to J. S. and his heirs, to the use of W. S. for twenty years, and limits the use no further; in this case the residue of the use after the twenty years shall be to the feoffor and his heirs.

But if in these cases there be any consideration of money, or the like, though never so little given, or any rent reserved upon the feoffment, the law will adjudge the use in feoffee, or reversioner. Hil. 37 Eliz. C. B. Baker's case.

And yet in that case also if other uses be expressed upon the deed, it shall go to the uses expressed; as if A. for 20 l. paid by B. enfeoffs B. and his heirs, to the use of C. and his heirs. Dott. & Stud. 95.

If the husband and wife levy a fine of the wife's land without consideration and without any declaration of use, the law will adjudge this to be to the use of the wife and her heirs; but if they sell her land for money, and after levy a fine thereof to the vendee; this shall be to the use of the vendee and his heirs.

And if a man be seised of land of the part of his mother, and without any consideration makes a feoffment in fee of it; this shall be said to be to his use in the same nature he had before.

So if two jointenants be of land, the one in fee-simple and the other but for life, and they without any consideration levy a fine of it, and make no declaration of use; the use shall be to them of the same estate as they had before in the land.

So if A. tenant for life of land, and B. in reversion or remainder levy a fine of this land generally; this shall be to the use of A. for life, and to the use of B. in fee afterwards, as it was before.

So if A. be seised in fee of an acre of ground, and he and B. join together and levy a fine of it to another without any consideration; this shall be to the use of A. and his heirs only. 2 Co. 57, 58.

If one makes a gift in tail, or lease for life or years, although it be without any consideration of fine or rent, yet the law will adjudge the use in the donee or lessee, and not to the donor or lessor. Perk. § 533.

If one at this day by deed indented bargain and sell his land to another for money, and limits no estate, but the deed is habendum to him only, and not habendum to him and his heirs, or to him and the heirs of his body, or to him for life; howsoever in this case, before the statute of uses was made, it was otherwise; yet now the common received opinion is, that by this there passes only an estate for life, and not a fee-simple. Plow. 539. Co. 87. Comp. Jur. 47. 27 H. 8. 6.

If a feoffment be made to J. S. and his heirs to the use of J. D. without any more words; by this limitation J. D. has only an estate for life.

So if a feoffment be made to J. S. and his heirs to the use of J. D. forever without saying and his heirs, hereby J. D. has only an estate for life.

And so of other uses the construction shall be according to the rules of law. Co. Lit. Dyer 169.

If an estate be limited to J. S. and his heirs until A. shall come from beyond sea, and attain his full age, or die; in this case if he comes from beyond sea, attains his full age, or dies, the use shall cease. Pas. 3 Eliz. B. R. Ld. Mordaunt's case.

If one covenants to stand seised to the use of A. his eldest son, and the heirs-male of his body, and after to the use of B. his second son in tail, in the same manner, or according to the limitation to A. by this B. has an estate-tail to him and the heirs-male of his body. 17 Jac. B. R. Ridgeway's case.

If a feoffment in fee be made to the use of a man and his wife for their lives, and after the use of their next issue-male to be begotten, in tail, and after to the issue of the husband and wife, and of the heirs of their two bodies begotten, (they having no issue-male) by this the husband and wife are tenants in special tail executed; and after they have no issue-male they are tenants for life, the remainder to the son in tail, the remainder to the son in special tail. Co. Lit. 28.

If one makes a feoffment to the use of himself for life, and after his decease to the use of Alice, whom he intends to marry, until the issue he shall beget of her shall be of the age of one and twenty years, and after the issue comes to that age, then to the use of the wife during her widowhood, and the husband dies without issue; by this the wife shall have an estate at least during her widowhood. Dyer 300.

If

If I covenant with B. that in consideration he will marry my daughter, that from the time of the marriage I will stand seised to the use of myself for life, and after to the use of C. a stranger and the heirs male of his body, and after to the use of B. and my daughter and the heirs of their two bodies; in this case although the use limited to C. the stranger be void, yet B. and my daughter shall not have the land till the death of C. without issue, that my heirs shall have it till that time. Co. 175.

If I covenant with B. to stand seised to the use of myself for life, and after my death to the use of C. a stranger for the term of twenty years, and after the end of the term to the use of my son in tail; in this case the use limited to C. is void, and my son after my death shall have the land.

But if the words of the covenant be, and after the end of twenty years, instead of and after the end of the term, my son shall not have the land until the twenty years be expired. Co. 155.

Lands and tenements conveyed upon confidences, uses and trusts, are to be ruled and decided (if a question arises upon the confidences, uses or trusts,) by the judges of the law. Co. Lit. 271. b. Carter 197. T. Raym. 317.

The intention of the parties shall be observed in the creation of uses; but when they are created, they shall be governed by the rules of law. Lutw. 824.

Before the stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. Uses were to be executed according to the rules of equity, but now they are reduced to the common law, and are to be construed according to the rules of law. 2 Mod. 251.

(O) Where and how Uses of Land may be extinguished and destroyed, or suspended, or not; and where the antient Uses shall be revived by the Entry of the Feoffees, or not.

AL L such uses as are not within nor executed by the statute of 27 H. 8. but remain at the common law, may be destroyed, discontinued or suspended, as uses before the statute might have been; and therefore contingent uses may be extinguished or suspended at this day.

As if a man seised of land in fee have three sons A. B. and C. and he makes a feoffment of his land to divers feoffees, to the use of them and their heirs during the life of A. and after to the use of the first son that A. shall beget, and the heirs-male of the body of such first son; or if a feoffment be made to the use of a man, and the wife that he shall marry, or the like; if in these cases the feoffees make a feoffment over before the contingent uses happen to be in esse, as before A. have any son, or the man takes a wife, &c. although it be to one that has notice of these uses, yet the uses are destroyed for ever, and the feoffees cannot enter and revive them contrary to their own feoffment.

And if in these cases the feoffees before the contingent remainder vest be disseised, hereby the uses are suspended; but then by the re-entry of the feoffees the antient uses will be revived again.

And therefore if the feoffees release to the disseisor, and so bar themselves of their entry, the uses are extinguished, and shall not be revived; and the party grieved has no remedy but in chancery against the feoffees for breach of trust.

And if the feoffees in the first case before die before A. have any son born, the contingent remainder is gone.

As where a feoffment is made to the use of the feoffor for life, and after to the use of the right heirs of J. S. in fee, and the feoffor dies before J. S. in this case the remainder is gone, for a remainder cannot be without a particular estate no more of a use than of an estate made in possession, and such a remainder must vest during the particular estate, at least eo instanti when the particular estate ends. Co. 120. Chudleigh's case.

If a feoffment be made to the use of J. S. and the wife he shall afterwards marry, and the heirs-male of their bodies, and J. S. makes a feoffment of this land to another before he takes a wife; hereby the contingent remainder is destroyed. Co. 136.

If A. enfeoffs B. and his heirs to the use of C. and D. his wife, and the heirs of the survivor of them, and C. makes a feoffment to E. and dies, this feoffment destroys the contingent remainder. Hil. 2 Car. in Scac' adjudged.

When the estate out of which the uses arise is gone, the uses are gone also.

As if a lease be made to A. for his life, to the use of B. for his life, and A. dies, hereby the estate of B. is gone. Dyer 186.

Also uses of lands may be gone by revocation; where see in the next division.

(P) Where a Power to revoke Uses of Land shall be good, and how they shall be taken; and what Revocation by Reason of such Power shall be good, and what not. See 2 Bur. Rep. 1136, &c. Atkyns's Rep. 558. 2 Atkyns's Rep. 88, 172, 353, 414, 565.

Provisoes and powers of revocation of uses of lands very frequent in voluntary conveyances (whether by feoffment or otherwise) that pass land by way of raising of uses, and are executed by the statute of 27 H. 8. and the inheritances of many depend thereupon.

As if a man seised of land in fee have divers sons, and he covenants to stand seised of that land to the use of himself for life, and after of his eldest son in tail, and for want of such issue, to the use of his second son in tail, &c. with a proviso that it shall be lawful for him at any time during his life to revoke any of the said uses, and to limit and appoint other uses, &c.

Or if A. by indenture between him and B. his heir apparent an infant, covenants with B. for the advancement of his blood, &c. to stand seised to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of his said heir apparent and the heirs-male of his body, and after to the use of his right heirs, provided that if A. by himself, or any other during his life, shall deliver or offer to B. a ring of gold, to the intent to make void all the same uses, that then the said uses shall be void, and he may limit new uses.

Or if A. by indenture covenants with B. to stand seised to the use of himself and his wife, and his daughter for their lives, and after, &c. provided that if the said A. during his life, and after the debts mentioned in the schedule annexed to the indenture shall be paid, shall be disposed to determine, disannul, change, alter or enlarge, diminish or make void the uses or states, or any of them, of the premises, or any part thereof, and by writing indented under his hand and seal, subscribed in the presence of three witnesses, shall declare his mind to be so, that then the same uses shall be void; all these and such like provisos being coupled with an use, are allowed to be good, and not repugnant to the former estates.

But in case of such a feoffment or other conveyance whereby the feoffee or grantee is in the common law, as where A. infeoffs B. and his heirs to the use of B. and his heirs, is said such a proviso is merely repugnant and void.

As to these provisos or revocations observe these things:

First, These revocations are favourably interpreted, because many mens inheritances depend upon them.

And therefore he that has power may revoke part of the uses at one time, and part at another time; and the revocation of the old may be made by the making of new uses without any express revocation.

And by the same conveyance, whereby the old uses are revoked, the new use may be created and limited, and then the former uses cease ipso facto by this revocation without any entry or claim; as,

If one covenants to stand seised to the use of himself and his wife for their lives, and after to the use of A. his daughter for life, and after to the use of B. his daughter in tail, &c. provided that if he should be minded, &c. he may by writing, &c. make void the same uses, and declare the uses to others, and he makes void the use to his wife at one time and no more, and after by a deed limits and appoints new uses of the whole by a new covenant to stand seised to other uses; these are good revocations, for there needs no real and express revocation of former uses, but the creating of new uses is in law an actual revocation of the old uses, as the making of a latter is ipso facto a revocation of a former will.

Secondly, The proviso must for the substance of it be pursued in the revocation, and all incident circumstances thereof must be observed, as sealing, subscription of names, witnesses, and the like, otherwise the revocation will not be good.

And therefore if the proviso be, that if the covenantor shall be minded to revoke, and shall declare his mind by writing indented under his hand and seal, delivered before three witnesses, the uses, shall be void; in this case a revocation by word without writing, or a writing and not indented, or by writing indented and not under hand and seal, or under hand and seal and before two witnesses only, is not good. Co. Lit. 237. 7 Co. 11, 12. Co. 143. Co. 110, 173, 107. Dyer 372.

And yet if a proviso be, that if the covenantor shall at any time during his life, by writing under his hand and seal delivered before two witnesses, revoke the same, &c. the old uses shall be void; and the covenantor by his last will and testament in writing, under his hand and seal before two witnesses, gives the land to another, and makes no express revocation revocation of the former uses; this is a good revocation in law, Trin. 18 Jac. C. B. Tibbet and Lea's case.

If the proviso be, that if the covenantor be minded at any time during his life to revoke the same uses, &c. and shall pay or tender to A. B. 20 s. in such a place; in this case the tender of this 20 s. in that place at any time is not good unless he happens to meet with A. B. at the place, for then the tender at any time is good; but otherwise the covenantor must give notice to A. B. what time he will tender the 20 s. in that place, otherwise the revocation is not good. 8 Co. 921.

If one be to marry his daughter to the son of another man, and they mutually covenant to stand seised of their lands to the uses of their son and daughter, with proviso to revoke the uses with the consent of the mother, if they or either of them be then living, and one of them dies; in this case a revocation by the consent of the surviving mother is sufficient.

Thirdly, When the covenantor makes void such uses by virtue of such a revocation, he is seised again of the land in fee-simple, as he was at first, without any entry or claim. Trin. 18 Jac. B. R. Savil and Stirling's case.

Fourthly, This power of revocation, whether it be present, as those before mentioned, and most are, or future, as when they are upon contingent; as if the covenantor overlives J. S. or the like, when it is reserved to the party himself that made the uses, and provisos are annexed, may by his fine or feoffment be utterly extinguished; as if he makes a feoffment, or levies a fine of land whereunto the uses and provisos are annexed, by this the proviso is extinct.

And yet so as if he makes a feoffment, or levies a fine of part of the land only, this shall extinguish his power but to that part only: but if the power be reserved to a stranger a fine or feoffment of him that made it will not extinguish it. This power also when it is present may be extinguished by a release made by him that has the power to any one that hath any estate of freehold in the land in possession, reversion or remainder; or it may be avoided by defeasance whether it be present or future. Co. 111, 112, 113. Co. Lit. 237.

(Q) Other Trusts and Confidences of Lands and Chattels real and personal; the Nature of such Trusts, the Duty of them that are trusted, and the Remedy to be had against them for Breach of their Trusts.

IF one conveys his land to certain friends in trust, to the intent that they shall convey it to such persons as he shall set down in his last will and testament, or if a man delivers money to a friend in trust to purchase land for him and his heirs, to the end that he may have the profits thereof for his life, and to the end it may be conveyed to them afterwards:

Or if a man delivers money to his friend to buy land for him that delivers the money in his own name; or if a man infeoff his friend and his heirs of land, to the intent that he shall alien the land to whom J. S. shall appoint:

Or if land be conveyed to me in mortgage, and I pay all the money, but I, to prevent the jointure of my wife, or for some such like cause, name a friend joint purchaser with me, and so the conveyance is made to us both; if in any of these cases, or in any other such like case, the friend trusted proves false, and does not perform the trust, but turns the profits of the land to his own use, or refuses to settle it according to the trust, or the like, the party grieved must have his remedy in chancery; for these are not trusts or uses within the statute, nor such for which there is any remedy at the common law; and in that case where the land is settled to the intent that the friends trusted shall settle it where J. S. shall appoint, if J. S. does not appoint how it shall be settled, the feoffees shall have it to their own use. Crompt. Jur. 48. 54. 58, 59. Dyer 160. Fitz. Accompt. 122.

And if a man gives or grants his goods or chattels, as leases for years, or the like, to friends in trust to the use of himself for life, and after to perform his will, or the like; these are such uses and trusts as are not within the statute of uses, and for the breach of which there is no remedy at the common law, but in chancery only.

So if an obligation or statute be made to A. B. to the use of C. D. this is a trust of the same nature; and if A. B. releases the obligation without the consent of C. D. or gets the money into his own hands, C. D. shall have relief in chancery.

And in all these and such like cases, the general rules by which uses were governed at the common law are still in force, and take place as those by which uses and trusts are now the most part governed. Crompt. Jur. 45. 62. 65. Dyer 369. 11 Ed. 4. 2. 7 Ed. 4. 29.

Bro. Feoffment al' Use 60.

As First, If there be any cause to sue for or about the lands or goods wherewith the parties are trusted; as if they deny or delay to perform the trust, they must be compelled hereunto by suit in chancery. 7 Ed. 4. 29.

Secondly, The cestuy que use, or party for whom the trust is, cannot of himself dispose of the lands or goods; for the property and interest in law is in the trustees; and if it be an obligation or statute that is made to the use of another, cestuy que use cannot release it, but the trustees must release it.

Thirdly, If the party trusted so with lands, goods or chattels, gives, grants or sells the same lands, goods or chattels, to one who has knowledge of the same uses or trusts as it is always presumed he has, where the trusts are expressed upon the same deed by which the lands, goods or chattels, are given or granted) or if the things so given or granted, be granted upon the same trusts, or to the same uses, or without any consideration at all; in these cases he to whom the thing about which the trust is shall have the same thing upon the same trust, and to the same use, as he that gave or granted the same had it.

But where no trust or use is expressed upon the deed, the purchaser or buyer has no notice or knowledge of the use or trust, and he gives a valuable consideration for the thing, here for the most part the sale is good; and the party grieved thereby has no remedy but against the party first trusted in chancery; and the purchaser shall have and enjoy the thing bought to his own use for ever; but he that is the party trusted will be forced in chancery to make the party grieved an amends in damages for this breach of trust: and if there be any practice or combination between the buyer and the seller in the matter, there perhaps the suit may hold against them both, and the buyer may be forced to restore the thing itself. Crompt. Jur. Co. 62, 63, 65. 11 Ed. 4. 24.

And yet, if A. enters into a statute to B. and C. to the use of B. and A. having notice of this use, gets a release from C. in this case B. must have his whole remedy against C. and shall have no remedy against A. 11 Ed. 4. 8.

Fourthly, If the trustor or cestuy que use in these cases commits felony, &c. so that the things, if he had the property of them, were forfeited; in this case it seems that neither they nor their heirs, executors, &c. nor the lord, &c. shall have them, but the trustees shall keep them for ever. Bro. Feoffment al' Use 34.

Fifthly, If the cestuy que use or trustor die and appoint how the same things shall be disposed of, the trustees are bound to see it done; as if the trustor appoints it shall pay his debts, or provide legacies, the parties trusted must take care it be so employed; and in this case the debtees and legatees also may compel the trustees in chancery. 15 H. 7. 12.
Crompt. Jur. 54.

Sixthly, In all these cases regularly the thing whereof the trust is, is in equity at the disposing of him that is the cestuy que use, unless he otherwise appoints it; and if at his death he makes no disposition thereof, it shall go to his heir, executor, &c. Dyer 49.

Seventhly, In all these cases the trustees shall have their reasonable allowance in chancery for whatsoever they have laid out about the land, &c. in suits or otherwise for the profit of the trustor.

Out of all which appears how dangerous it is for a man to meddle with any lands, goods or chattels so conveyed or settled in trust, for the cestuy que use or trustors have no property in the thing, and therefore they cannot sell or give it, and the trustee has it but to another's use; and it is not safe therefore to deal with either of them alone, nor yet indeed safe to deal at all in these cases, unless the buyer may have the consent, sale and assurance, or the release, &c. of the trustors and trustees altogether.

And if there be any feme covert, or infant within the trust, it is most of all dangerous. H. 7. 11.

And if goods or chattels be given to, or to the use of a feme covert or infant, and certain ends are trusted therewith; if they sell or give away these goods or chattels contrary to the trust, they must be sure to answer it:

If therefore they sell them, let them see that the money made thereof be as beneficial, and be bestowed for the wife or children; for it is not sufficient in this case that the money made thereof be paid to them. 7 Ed. 6. 14. Fitz. Subpæna 5.

(R) What Uses require no Execution by the Statute of Uses.

THERE are uses which require no execution by the statute of uses, (27 H. 8. c. 10.) as when a man conveys lands to J. S. and his heirs, to the use of J. S. and his heirs.

And when lands are conveyed to others in trust after this or the like manner, viz. That the feoffees shall take the profits, and deliver them to the feoffor and his heirs; such a trust is not executed by the statute, but remains as before at common law, and is determinable in equity in the court of chancery. Crompt. Jur. Co. 48.

Also leases for years of lands in use (which leases had their being before, and are granted over in use and trust) are not executed by the statute; and therefore,

If a lessee for years of lands assigns over his estate to A. and B. and their assigns, to the use of the grantor and his wife; all the estate is in A. and B. and the grantor has nothing but an use, for which he has his remedy in chancery only.

And yet if a feoffment be made to the use of A. and B. and his assigns for years; this use is executed by the statute, because the lease had not its being before; and because the words of the statute are, If any shall stand or be seised of any lands; whereas the lessee for years of lands that had their being before, was possessed only of his term, and not seised of any freehold. Dyer 369. Crompt. Jur. 66.

So there still remains an use of goods and chattels personal, which is properly called a chancery-trust and confidence; for one may still have such things in trust, and to the use of another. Here still the use and possession are divided, because not united by the statute. Thus if an obligation, or statute merchant or staple be made to A. to the use of B. this is a trust of the same nature.

And if A. releases the obligation, &c. without the consent of B. or gets the money into his own hands, B. shall have relief in the chancery.

And when there are other trusts and confidences of lands that are not executed by the statute, or of chattels real or personal, and the trustee proves false, or delays to execute the trust, the party grieved must have his remedy in equity, for there is no remedy at common law. Crompt. Jur. 45. 62.

Lands were devised to trustees and their heirs, in trust to pay several legacies and annuities, and to pay the surplus of the rents and profits to a married woman during her life, for her separate use, or as she should direct, and after her death the trustees to stand seised to the use of the heirs of her body, with remainders over; and the question was, whether this devise to pay the surplus of the rents and profits to the wife was such an use or trust as was executed by the 27 H. 8. And it was held by the court, that she had only a trust for life, and consequently the heirs of her body must take by purchase; and the rather in this case, because it was limited to the heirs of her body severally and successively, as they should be in seniority of age and priority of birth, and the heirs of their respective bodies issuing; and a difference was taken between this case and that of Broughton and Langley, 2 Salk. 679. 1 Lut. 823. S. C. for there it was to permit A. to receive the rents and profits for life; but here it is a trust in the trustees to pay over the rents and profits to such and such persons, and therefore the estate must remain in them to answer these trusts, otherwise she must be the trustee, contrary to the express words of the will. Abr. Ca. Eq. 383, 384.

The father covenanted with B. G. that in consideration of a marriage between his son and the daughter of the said B. G. that before such a day he would levy a fine of certain lands which should be to the use of the son and daughter in tail, &c. the fine was acknowledged accordingly; the father died. Adjudged that the deed did not mention any marriage between the son and daughter, yet the estate-tail was executed in them before the marriage had, because the fine without any consideration carries the uses, and they are perfected by the fine, though the consideration is executed afterwards; but without a fine, such a consideration would not have raised an use, for in such case the marriage must be had, and the consideration executed before any use could arise. 1 Leon. 138.

In covenant, &c. the plaintiff declared that the defendant had bargained and sold to him (the plaintiff) four messuages, by the name of all his lands in H. and did covenant to levy a fine of them for farther assurance, (but in fact the covenant was to levy a fine of all his lands in H.) and sets forth, that he tendered a fine to the defendant, to be levied by him of all those four houses comprehended in the deed; the defendant pleads, that at the time of the covenant he was seised of two houses, &c. and that the other two descended to him afterwards upon the death of his ancestor, and traversed that he was seised of the lands modo & forma; and upon a demurrer the defendant had judgment; for that the plaintiff had declared that the defendant was seised, and sold him four messuages, and that he tendered him a fine of so many; and the defendant pleaded, that he was seised of two, and no more, and so would have the fine extend beyond the covenant; and therefore he might well refuse it when tendered. 1 Rol. Rep. 103. 117.

A Covenant to stand seised to uses is when a man (who has a wife, children, brother, or kindred) by bare covenant in writing under his hand and seal agrees, in consideration of natural love and affection, marriage or other good consideration, that for their or any of their provision or preferment he and his heirs will stand seised of land to their uses, either in fee-simple, fee-tail, or for life.

As to the nature, kinds, &c. of Uses, see the last section, where they are fully treated of.

This covenant to stand seised to uses is become a conveyance of land since the stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. and it needs not be by deed indented and inrolled, which is requisite to a bargain and sale of a freehold; of which see the next section.

A covenant for a valuable consideration to stand seised to another's use, if inrolled, is in the nature of a bargain and sale. 2 Inst. 672.

THERE are five things necessary to raise an use by way of covenant to stand seised.

1. A sufficient consideration.
2. A deed.
3. Seisin in the covenantor at the time of the deed.
4. A clear and apparent intent.
5. Apt and proper words. 1 Vent. 140.

(C) Of the Consideration in Covenants to stand seised to Uses.

IF the party to whose use one covenants to stand seised of the land is not his wife, or one that he intends to marry, his child, uncle, cousin, or one that his kinsman intends to marry, no use will arise, and so no conveyance.

The law allows in such cases the consideration of blood and marriage to raise uses, as well as money, and other valuable or profitable consideration, when the use is to a stranger.

But it does not allow any trifling consideration of service, old acquaintance, &c. Plow. 302. 2 Roll. Abr. 783.

Yet where a man conveys an estate of his land to others by feoffment, fine, recovery, or by feoffment, fine or recovery, to the use of his last will, and afterwards declares the uses in his last will, he may appoint an use without any consideration. 2 Co. 58. 6 Co. 18. Ca. Lit. 271. b. 2 Roll. Abr. 781.

But in a covenant to stand seised, or in a bargain and sale, there must be a consideration expressed, or specially averred, where the consideration is general, (as for good consideration, &c.) though the matter so averred be traversable. Co. 176. 2 Co. 15. 11 Co. 25.

Always, where there is no transmutation of the possession, it is necessary and requisite that there be a good consideration to create an use. Plow. 202. b. 7 Co. 13. b.

Where there is a covenant to pay certain sums of money, and a declaration that, if these sums be not paid, the feoffees shall stand seised of the premises till they have levied the said sums; when there is a failure of payment they may enter; and if the heir has not entered upon them they may hold over, pari ratione when he continues and receives the profits. Cart. 77.

Even if he had assigned, or for a valuable consideration conveyed over the land, after the failure of payment, the feoffee or assignee takes the estate, subject to his use, and liable to this charge. Ibid.

For a future use is a charge and burden upon the land in whosoever hands it comes, and cannot be destroyed. Cro. Eliz. 688, 689.

If a man, in consideration of money received and marriage to be had with his son, covenant to stand seised, there no use will arise to the son and woman without marriage, although the money be paid, because the marriage is the principal consideration in the intent of the parties, and the money is but the accessory which attends the marriage; but it would have been good by estate executed by fine, feoffment or recovery. Moor. Case 247.

A covenant to stand seised, &c. in consideration of natural affection to the covenantor's son, and of one hundred pounds. Per Bridgman—The principal consideration, (i. e. the consideration of blood) will carry it: And in this deed there is a mixed consideration, and there needs no inrolment. Carter 114.—So adjudged 2 Vent. 266. 3 Lev. 291. 4 Mod. 149.

A. seised in fee, covenanted to stand seised to the use of B. in consideration of payment of his debts out of his own estate; this use is void, because there was no consideration on the part of B. to raise the use, the money appointed to be paid being to be raised out of the profits of the estate of A. the covenantor. 1 Leon. 194, 195.

A. covenants that in consideration of discharging his funeral expences, and payment of his debts and legacies out of the profits of his lands, and for the advancement of his son, that he would stand seised to the use of himself for life, and after his death to C. and D. for twenty-five years, and after the end of that term to his son in tail: This term of twenty-five years is void for want of a good consideration, because C. and D. were strangers to the consideration, viz. To the payment of his debts and legacies. But if they had been executors, whereby they became privy to the consideration, and chargeable with the payment of the debts and legacies, then the consideration had been good. Co. 154. a.

Note; This is in case of a term for years where there needs no inrolment.

Money will not raise an use upon a covenant to stand seised without inrolment. Law. 201.

An use will rise upon a lease and release if there be five shillings consideration in the lease, and no consideration at all in the release.

A covenant, in consideration of the covenantor's natural love and affection to his wife, to stand seised to the use of himself for life, then to the use of the wife for life, with power for her to limit over the estate to such person as she should appoint; no use can arise to the person appointed. Fitz-Gibb. 229. Ca. in Chan. and K. B. from 4 to 7 Geo. 2. 107.

(D) What amounts to a Covenant to stand seised, or not.

A. Seised in fee of a reversion expectant upon an estate for life, by deed-poll, in consideration of natural love to his wife, and B. his son, begotten on her body, and his daughter, did give, grant and confirm unto B. his son, all those lands, &c. the reversion and reversions, &c. To hold to him to the uses following, viz. To the use of himself for life, and after to the said B. in tail, and after to C. his daughter in tail. A. died, the son devised to the lessor of the plaintiff, and died without issue. C. the daughter, pretended pretence of her remainder, entered, against whom an ejectment was brought of the demise of B. the devisee; there was no execution of this deed but sealing and delivery. Now the sole question was, whether this deed amounts to a covenant to stand seised, or is void? Whereupon it was first adjudged to amount to such a covenant, but the judgment was afterwards reversed, and the deed adjudged void; and the reversal affirmed in parliament. 2 Vent. 318, 319.

A rent granted, as well in consideration of natural affection as for money, amounts to a covenant, to stand seised, and may be so pleaded without inrolment. 4 Mod. 150.

W. seised of a reversion in fee expectant upon an estate for life, in consideration of natural love and affection, did give, grant and confirm to his son all those lands, and the reversion and reversions, &c. habendum to the son and his heirs, to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of the grantee (who was his son) and the heirs of his body; and for want of such issue, remainder to his daughter in tail: There was no execution of this deed by attornment or inrolment, or otherwise; this does not amount to a covenant to stand seised. 2 Vent. 319.

(E) Who may covenant to stand seised to Uses.

A Man at common law could not during the coverture limit an estate to his wife: But now by deed he may covenant to stand seised to her use, or make other conveyance to another for the use of his wife. Co. Lit. 112. a. 7 Co. 40. Braet. lib. 2. c. 12. It is requisite that the covenantor be seised at the time of making the deed; for a man cannot covenant to stand seised to an use of land which he shall afterwards purchase, or is not then seised of. 3 Lev. 306, 307.

(F) To whose Use Covenants to stand seised may be, or not.

A Husband may now covenant to stand seised to the use of his wife, or may make other conveyance to another for her use. Co. Lit. 112. a. 7 Co. 40. Vide Braet. lib. 2. c. 12.

Such covenant may be to the use of a stranger, but then it must be for money, or other valuable consideration, and not for love and affection, &c. Vide Co. 176. 2 Co. 15. Lev. 56.

A father cannot covenant that his son shall stand seised of the lands whereof the father is seised; for a man cannot stand seised of that which he is not seised of. 3 Lev. 306, 307.

See of Considerations in Covenants to stand seised to Uses.

(G) Of what a Covenant to stand seised may not be.

Covenant to stand seised of an office is void. 3 Mod. 145.

(H) What Words amount to a Covenant to stand seised.

Settlement was made as follows, viz. That if I have no issue, and in case I die without issue of my body lawfully begotten, then I give, grant and confirm my land, &c. to my woman J. S. to have and to hold the same to the use of myself for life, and after my decease the use of the said S. and the heirs of her body to be begotten, with remainders over, &c. The question was, Whether this amounted to a covenant to stand seised, so as to raise an estate to S. without transmutation of the possession? It is a covenant to stand seised, tho' the usual words are wanting to make it so; and so it was adjudged. 3 Mod. 237. Comb. 128. 11, in com. 384.

A man seised in fee by indenture inrolled within six months, for the consideration of natural love to his daughter, and for the augmentation of her portion and preferment in marriage, and other valuable considerations, did give, grant, bargain, sell, alien, infeoff, and confirm to his said daughter and her heirs. The question thereupon was, Whether this be a deed? Per Finch Attorney General—The word covenant is not absolutely necessary, so that that there be other words sufficient in law to declare the parties' intent, for all words will not serve. Adjudged a good deed. All held that words proper for a conveyance at common law will raise an use, as demise and grant in consideration of money has amounted to a bargain and sale. And per cur'—If an use should not arise by such conveyance it would overthrow all conveyances by lease and release. Vent. 140, 141, 142.

These memorials are to be on vellum or parchment; some have them on a double six-penny stamp; others without a stamp; the register receives both, and to be signed and sealed in common form by one of the grantors or grantees, his or their executors, administrators, guardians or trustees, attested by two witnesses; and one of the witnesses to the deed must be a witness to the memorial, who is to make oath of the due execution of both before the register, and also produce the deed, grant, or will, at the same time.

The memorial, certificate and affidavit of a judgment, statute or recognizance, is written on one piece of parchment, with a treble six-penny stamp. Qu. If the stamp is necessary.

The memorials are to be left in the office, and after they are registered, the register certifies the same upon the back of the deed, which certificate is evidence in courts of record.

And also that in every deed, instrument, or other assurance, whereby any annuity or rent-charge shall be granted, attempted to be granted, the consideration, really and bona fide (which shall be in money only) and also the name and names of the person or persons by whom, or on whose behalf the said consideration, or any part thereof shall be granted, shall be fully and truly set forth and described in words at length, and in case the sum shall not be fully and truly set forth and described, every such deed, instrument, or other assurance, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes.

And also that if any part of the consideration shall be returned to the person advancing the same, or in case the consideration, or any part of it, is paid in notes, if any of the notes, with the privity and consent of the person advancing the same, shall not be paid when due, or shall be cancelled or destroyed without being first paid, or if the consideration, or any part of it is paid in goods, or if any part of the consideration is retained on pretence of awaiting the future payments of the annuity, or any other pretence; in all and every of the above cases, it shall and may be lawful for the person by whom the annuity or rent-charge is made payable, to apply to the court in which action is brought for payment of the annuity, on judgment entered, by motion to stay proceedings on the judgment or action, and if it shall appear to the court that such practices as aforesaid, or any of them have been used, it shall and may be lawful for the court to order the deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance to be cancelled, and judgment, if any has been entered, to be vacated.

And also that a particular roll shall be provided and kept by the clerks of the inrolments in chancery, or their clerks, on which such memorials shall be entered, and that every such memorial shall be inrolled in order of time the same shall be brought to the office; And the clerks of the inrolment, or their deputy, shall specify upon the memorial the certain day, hour, and time on which such memorial is brought to the office; and shall grant a certificate of inrolment thereof when required, and there shall be paid for the inrolment of every such memorial, the sum of one shilling, and no more, in case the same do not exceed two hundred words; but if such memorial shall exceed two hundred words, then after the rate and proportions of sixpence for every one hundred words, and the fees for every certificate and copy given, and the fee of one shilling for every search in the office, and no

Of Mortgages.

See Atkynn's Rep. 520. 477. 2 Atkyns's 2. 53. 107. 331. 435.

(A) Mortgage what.

A Mortgage is a pawn or conveyance, for securing the payment of money borrowed and interest, of all one's right or title in lands or goods, on condition to be void on payment of the principal and interest at the day appointed.

He who mortgages or pawns is called the mortgagor or pawnor, and he to whom the mortgage or pawn is made is called the mortgagee or pawnee, or tenant in mortgage.

The word Mortgage is derived of two French words, mort, i. e. mortuum, and gage, i. e. vadium, or pignus. And it is called in Latin, mortuum vadium, or mortgagium. Co. Lit. 205. a.

A mortgage is so called for two reasons, the first (according to Lit. § 332.) is because it is doubtful whether the feoffor will pay the mortgage-money at the day limited, and if he does not pay, then the land pledged upon condition is taken from him for ever, (Note, Littleton can't here mean that the mortgagee shall have a greater estate in the land than the mortgagor had, but that he shall have the like, whether in fee, for life or years) and so dead to him upon condition, &c. And if he pays the money, then the pledge is dead as to the tenant, &c.

And the second reason it is so called, is to distinguish it from that which is called vivum vadium. Vivum autem dicitur vadium, quia nunquam moritur ex aliqua parte, quod ex suis proventibus acquiratur. As if a man borrows 100*l.* of another, and makes an estate of land to him until he has received the said sum of the issues and profits of the land, so that as in this case neither money nor land dies, or is lost, and therefore is called vivum vadium. Co. Lit. 205.

All pledges of land are commonly called mortgages, though improperly, as appears by what is said before; for pledges of land are either vivum vadium, or mortuum vadium.

In the first case the pawnee is let into the receipts and profits of the estate till the money is paid.

And in the latter case, which is more common, the mortgagor holds the lands; and if failure of payment be made, and the mortgagee enters into the lands, yet the mortgagor has an equity of redemption in the court of chancery, and may call the mortgagee to account for the profits.

But when the mortgagor holds the lands, and the money is not paid at the day, he may bring his bill to foreclose the equity of redemption.

See Of Conditions in Deeds before at p. 261, &c.

* If any part of the money be paid in notes, state those notes expressly and fully. Ex. gratia, "And the said sum of — l. being the consideration money paid for the absolute purchase of the said annuity was paid in manner following, that is to say, the sum of three hundred pounds, part thereof, by the said C. D. to the said A. B. in the presence of the said R. L. and G. H. in lawful money of Great Britain, at or immediately before the execution of the above mentioned indenture, bond, and warrant of attorney; and the sum of — l. being the residue due and remainder of the said purchase money, by a certain bill of exchange, drawn, &c. &c." And in like manner state at length the nature of the consideration whatever it be, and how it is made out, fully, clearly, and precisely.

A mortgage is the same thing as the hypotheca of the civilians, and may be defined a pledging of lands or other immoveable thing for money lent in such manner that the property or usufructus of the thing pledged remains with the debtor till such time as default is made in payment of the money at the time appointed. Abr. Ca. Eq. 310, 311.
A mortgage is but a revocation pro tanto. 2 Ld. Raym. 968.

(B) How a Mortgage is made. See 2 Burr. Rep. 941.

It is usually made by a lease for a long term of years, by lease and release, by assignment, bargain or bill of sale, &c. of which see a variety of forms in the second volume.
A mortgage may be made without a covenant or bond for payment of the money. Will. 270.

(C) What shall be a good Mortgage.

If A. agrees for a valuable consideration to convey lands to J. S. and afterwards makes a mortgage for a valuable consideration and without notice, the mortgagee shall hold his mortgage against the intended purchaser. Will. 277.
Where a first mortgagee is a witness to a second mortgage, though there is no actual proof of his knowing the contents thereof, yet since the presumption is that he might have known the same, this shall postpone him. Will. 394.
It is a general rule in chancery, that once a mortgage and always a mortgage.

(D) Of usurious Mortgages. See 2 Burr. Rep. 716. 2 Atk. Rep. 393.

Hazardous bargains are not always set aside in a court of equity, for they may be fair; and it is only upon the circumstances of fraud, or being extremely unreasonable, that they can be overthrown. But bargains of this kind will be assisted in equity, though there be not sufficient grounds to set them quite aside. Vide Vern. 271. 2 Chan. Ca. 136, 137. Vern. 15.
And regularly the party who comes to be relieved must restore the money paid, &c. according to that maxim in equity, He who would have equity must do equity. A person intitled to an estate after the death of two old lives, took 330*l.* to pay 700*l.* when the lives should have lasted 20 years, and the estate failed, and mortgaged the estates by way of security; no relief was had against this bargain, though both the lives died in two years. And the Lord Keeper said, suppose these lives had lived never so long, could the other party have relief in equity? No; there is no precedent for it. 1 Vern. Rep. 141, 142.
P. being possessed of a reversionary term for thirty-six years, to commence in the year 1683, of the value of about 200*l.* per annum when the estate should fall, in the year 1683, borrowed of D. 200*l.* as a security for which P. assigned his term to D. defeasanced to be paid on payment of 40*l.* per ann. for eight years. P. brought his bill to redeem, paying principal, interest and costs; and the defendant insisted on the benefit of his bargain, having advanced his money on such a remote reversion. The court decreed a redemption on payment of the 200*l.* with simple interest at 6*l.* per cent. because the security is as usurious and against conscience. 2 Vern. 402.

(E) What shall be taken as a new Mortgage.

An old mortgage assigned to another ought to be taken as a new mortgage, but no assignee of a mortgage shall be in a better condition than the mortgagee, unless the mortgagor comes into the assignment. 3 Ch. Rep. 79. Chan. Ca. 218.
A second mortgage of lands has been decreed where a former was bad and defective, the land being still chargeable with the debt in equity. Rep. Time Finch 29. Vern. 554.

(F) What shall affect a second Mortgage, or not.

IT has been held that if a prior mortgagee conceals and denies his mortgage to a second mortgagee before he lends the money, the estate in equity shall stand charged in the first place for the second mortgagee's debt. Rep. Time Finch 29. 2 Vern. 554.

Where the first mortgagee is a witness to the second mortgage, though it does not appear that he actually knew the contents of the second mortgage; yet since the presumption is that he might have known the same, this shall give a preference to the second mortgage. 2 Will. 394.

If a man lends money on a mortgage, and the scrivener who was intrusted to draw the mortgage deed had notice of a prior mortgage, this notice shall affect the second mortgage. 2 Vern. 574.

A. mortgaged a great part of his estate for 50*l.* and afterwards became a lunatick, and his committee transferred this mortgage and took up 400*l.* more upon it; and Lord Chancellor declared the mortgage should stand as a security for the 50*l.* only. Vern. 262.

(G) Of buying in old Incumbrances to protect Mortgages.

THERE was first, second and third mortgagees, who had all lent their money without notice; the third mortgagee, hearing of the two former securities, buys in the first incumbrance, viz. a judgment that was satisfied, and he was allowed the benefit of it to protect his own security, though it was strongly insisted to be against conscience and contrary to equity. This point was settled in the case of Marsh and Lee, wherein the court decreed that a mortgagee may protect his mortgage by getting in an old incumbrance, though nothing be due on it. Vern. Rep. 187, 188. Chan. Ca. 162. 2 Vent. 387. Hard. 173.

A mortgagee buying in a precedent security of the lands contained in his mortgage, and other lands, shall hold against a middle mortgagee of those lands till all due on both securities be paid and satisfied. Chan. Ca. 201, 202.

But when only part of the lands are mortgaged to the first, and the whole to the second and after to the third, if the third mortgagee buys in the first title, it shall protect only the part which is first in mortgage. 2 Vent. 339.

So a purchaser or mortgagee coming in upon a valuable consideration without notice, and then purchasing in a precedent incumbrance, shall protect his estate against any person who has a mortgage subsequent to the first, though before the last mortgage; and though he purchased in the incumbrance after notice of a second mortgage. 2 Vent. 339.

In these cases a bill may be brought to compel the middle mortgagee to redeem, or foreclosed if he does not pay off both securities.

If a man lends 600*l.* on a mortgage, and afterwards discovering that the estate is mortgaged to J. S. he gets in an old satisfied incumbrance, and brings his bill against J. S. to redeem or be foreclosed, he needs not prove the actual payment of any money for the precedent incumbrance, the having the deed or an acquittance being sufficient, although it is objected that J. S. is equally a purchaser with him. 2 Vern. 279.

If a prior mortgage or statute be brought in, pending a bill brought by A. against the mortgagor, and B. who buys in such precedent statute or mortgage to foreclose, tho' the purchase be pendente lite, yet it will protect B. he being at liberty to do what he can for his own security. 2 Vern. 29. See Mod. Ca. in Law and Eq. 153.

But where A. made a mortgage to B. and afterwards a commission of bankruptcy was taken out against him, and the commissioners made an assignment of the estates, and C. lent the bankrupt 2000*l.* on a second mortgage having no notice of the first, though he afterwards got in the first mortgage; yet it was held by two lords commissioners against that this prior mortgage should not protect the mortgage subsequent to the bankruptcy, every one is bound to take notice of a commission of bankruptcy. 2 Vern. 157. 160.

And though a purchaser or mortgagee may buy in an incumbrance, or lay hold on a plank to protect himself; yet he shall not protect himself by the taking a conveyance from a trustee after he had notice of the trust, for by taking such conveyance he becomes trustee himself. 2 Vern. 271.

(H) In what Order Mortgages, Judgments, &c. are to be paid.

Mortgages have been decreed to be paid to creditors before judgments and recognizances, &c. but on appeal to the lords, it was adjudged that mortgages should not be preferred to other real incumbrances; but mortgages, judgments, statutes, &c. should take place and be paid according to priority. 2 Vern. 525.

If lands are devised in trust to pay mortgages in the first place, and then legacies, and the trustee is made executor who mortgages the lands to pay other debts, the last mortgage shall be paid before the legacies.

(I) How Mortgagee must be satisfied where the Premises fall short.

Plaintiff lent a sum of money on the mortgage of some houses, and had a bond for payment of the money; afterwards he lent a further sum on the equity of redemption, and had a bond for that likewise; afterwards the mortgagor became a bankrupt, and by some accident the value of the houses sunk so much that they were not sufficient to raise the money first lent: A bill was brought to have them sold, and that as to so much as they fall short to answer the first mortgage money, the mortgagee might come in upon his bond as a creditor; whereupon it was so decreed; and as to the other sum lent upon the equity, which was worth nothing, it must stand singly upon the bond. Abr. Ca. Eq. 312.

(K) Where Mortgage Money is presumed to be satisfied.

Mortgage money shall be presumed to be satisfied on a sleeping mortgage where the lands go into other hands by purchase, and no notice is given of the mortgage, &c. and the deed of mortgage shall be delivered up and cancelled. Also relief has been given in equity against an old mortgage where no demand was made upon it in 40 years, and the mortgagor decreed to hold the lands and a vacat to be entered on the enrolment of the mortgage. Chan. Rep. 105, 106.

(L) To whom Mortgage Money shall be paid on Death of Mortgagee, and to whom Mortgages shall descend.

ALL mortgages ought to be looked on as part of the personal estate, and on the death of the mortgagee the money shall be paid to the executor, (because the mortgage money is first out of the personal estate, and therefore should return thither again) except the mortgagee in his life-time or by his last will do otherwise declare and dispose of the same. Chan. Ca. 286. See Max. Eq. 21, 22. Abr. Ca. Eq. 326, 327.

A forfeited mortgage in fee has been decreed to be personal estate, and to belong to the executor and not to the heir. Chan. Rep. 283. Vern. 412.

But where a mortgage in fee was devised to daughters and their heirs, &c. the court held, that although it was a mortgage as between the mortgagor and mortgagee, yet the testator's intent was, that it should pass to his daughters as a real estate to them and their heirs, and not as a personal estate, and so decreed it to descend. Vern. 582, 583.

So where a mortgagee in fee entered for a forfeiture, and after many years enjoyment of the land to J. S. and his heirs; per cur. the estate shall not be looked on to be a mortgage in the hands of J. S. to make it part of his personal estate, but shall be for the benefit of the heir. Vern. Rep. 271.

(M) What shall be accounted Principal, and what Interest, and what shall carry Interest, and what the Mortgagee is accountable for.

Mortgagee had assigned his mortgage, and the question was, if what was really due to the mortgagee when he made his assignment, for principal and interest, and paid by the assignee, should be taken as principal, or so much only as the mortgagee lent; upon which it was decreed, that all money actually paid by the assignee which which was due to the mortgagee, should be principal from the time of the assignment, but the account between the mortgagee and assignee was not to conclude the mortgagor. Chan. Ca. 67, 68.

Where a mortgagor signs an account, whereby so much is admitted to be due for interest, this will not carry interest, unless the mortgagor by some letter or writing under his hand agrees to make it principal. Will. 653.

Equity apportions interest due upon a mortgage. 2 Will. 176.

If a mortgage be twenty years old, it is generally said, that the mortgagee shall have no interest on interest in equity; but in the case of Howard and Harris, the Lord Keeper was of opinion, and accordingly decreed, that as to so much interest as was reserved in the deed of mortgage being 60*l.* a year payable for a 1000*l.* principal money, that should be accounted principal and carry interest, because it being ascertained by the deed, action of debt would lie for it, and therefore there ought to be damages for non-payment. Vern. 194, 195.

It is a rule that a mortgagee of a mortgage forfeited shall have interest for his interest, and shall be only accountable for what profits he has received, and not for what he might have received except there were fraud; and it was always the rule that the mortgagee assigning the assignee shall have interest for the interest then due. Chan. Ca. 258.

J. S. mortgaged his estate to the plaintiff and died, leaving defendant his daughter and heir, who was an infant, and had nothing to subsist on but the rents of the mortgaged estate, and the interest being suffered to run in arrear, the plaintiff threatened to enter on the estate unless his interest might be made principal; upon which the defendant's mother with the privity of her nearest relations stated the account, and the defendant herself (who was then near of age) signed it; and the account being admitted to be fair, it was held, that though regularly interest should not carry interest, yet that in some cases and upon some circumstances it would be injustice if interest should not be made principal, and the rather in this case, because it was for the infant's benefit, who without this agreement would have been destitute of subsistence. Abr. Ca. Eq. 287.

But if a mortgage be forfeited, and the mortgagee refuses to receive his money due from the mortgagor on tender, he shall lose his interest from the time of the tender. Chan. Ca. 29.

(N) Who may redeem Mortgages.

BY stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 16. §. 4. it is enacted, That if it so happen there be more than one mortgage at the same time made by any person or persons, to any person or persons, of the same lands and tenements, the several late or under mortgagees, his, her, or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, shall have power to redeem any former mortgage or mortgages upon payment of the principal debt, interest, and costs of suit to the prior mortgagee or mortgagees, his, her, or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns; any thing therein contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

A bill was exhibited by the creditors of a mortgagor to have the estate sold for the payment of their debts, pending which suit the mortgagee obtained a decree to foreclose the mortgagor of the equity of redemption: Decreed that the creditor should redeem upon payment of the principal, interest and costs to the mortgagee. 8, 9 Mod. 153.

A second mortgagee may redeem the first mortgage; also creditors on judgments, who have been decreed to redeem mortgages towards satisfaction of their debts. 2 Ch. Rep. 39.

One who comes in by a voluntary conveyance may redeem a mortgage. Vern. 193.

Admitted he who comes to redeem a mortgage must shew a title. Vern. 182.

If a man enters into a bond in which he binds himself and his heirs, and dies, leaving a real estate to descend to his heir, subject to a mortgage for years, and the heir sells the equity of redemption, the obligee cannot redeem the mortgage without first having a judgment at law. Abr. Ca. Eq. 315.

A. gives a bond to his intended wife to leave her 1000*l.* if she survive him; the marriage was had, and A. died, leaving a freehold and copyhold estate in mortgage; and it was held, that the wife should redeem both estates, and hold over till she was satisfied. 2 Vern. 480.

(O) Of what a Bill in Equity may or may not be to redeem.

A Bill in equity will not lie to redeem a mortgage of chambers in the inns of court, but the plaintiff must apply to the bench or to the judges of the society; secus if on application to the bench they refer the plaintiff to his remedy in equity. Will. 511.

(P) Where one of two Things mortgaged, or Mortgage and Bond cannot be redeemed without the other.

IF A. mortgages his tenement for 200*l.* to B. and afterwards mortgages his manor of C. to B. likewise for 300*l.* The first mortgage being deficient in point of value, it was held, that if A. will redeem one, he must both. 2 Vern. 286.

Where there is a debt secured by mortgage, and likewise a bond debt, the mortgagor or his heir shall not be admitted to redeem the mortgage without paying the bond debt too, if the heir be bound. 2 Chan. Rep. 23. Vern. 244. 2 Vern. 177. Abr. Ca. Eq. 314. But see 2 Stra. 1107. Andr. 341.

And if a man makes two mortgages of several lands, and dies, and one of the mortgages is of an intailed estate, or deficient in value, the heir of the mortgagor shall not redeem one without redeeming the other. 2 Vern. Rep. 207.

(Q) Where a new Term is subject to the old Redemption.

ONE possessed of a renewable term mortgages it to J. S. who gains a new term from the original landlord, to commence after the old one; this new term shall be subject to the old equity of redemption. Will. 511.

(R) What a Mortgagor, &c. is liable to pay on Redemption.

IF a man has a debt owing to him by mortgage, and another by bond from the same person, he cannot tack them together against the mortgagor, but he shall be let into a redemption on payment of the mortgage only; but the heir in such a case shall not be let to a redemption without paying both, because the land in his hands is chargeable with the bond even at law; and since the statute against fraudulent devises, the devisee of the equity of redemption is in the same case with the heir, and cannot redeem without payment both, because the statute makes such devise void as against creditors, and then the devisee stands in the same place as the heir must have done if no devise had been made; but before that statute such devisee would not be liable to the bond debt. Abr. Ca. Eq. 325.

A. mortgaged his estate to B. and then assigned the equity of redemption to C. afterwards D. obtained a judgment against A. and B. the mortgagee assigns to D. his mortgage, then C. tenders the money due to D. who had notice of the assignment of the equity of redemption upon his first purchasing in his first mortgage: It was resolved that C. should redeem, paying only the money due on the mortgage, and not what was due on the judgment, because the equity of redemption was never bound by the judgment, for the judgment was not confessed so as to become a real lien upon the estate at the time when this equity was assigned, and therefore the judgment could never charge or affect it; and consequently C. purchased an estate not bound by the judgment, and by consequence the judgment-creditor by purchasing in the prior mortgage could never defeat the interest of C. It was also declared, that if a person who had a first mortgage should, without the consent of the mortgagor, purchase in a subsequent judgment, that a mesne mortgagee or assignee of the equity of redemption should not be obliged to pay the money due on both securities in order to redeem, because such transactions of the mortgagee was only to load the estate without the consent of the owner when he had no prospect of bettering his own security. Ca. Eq. 326.

(S) In what Time Redemption must be made.

NO clause can confine the equity of redemption of a mortgage to the life-time of the mortgagor, or to him and the heirs male, or the heirs only of his body.

The plaintiff's grandfather in 1686, mortgaged the estate in question, about 10*l.* per cent. for securing 100*l.* in 1696; this mortgage was assigned to defendant, who was let into possession, and continued so ever since, and is now about ninety years old; the mortgagor died.

died several years since, leaving the plaintiff's father his eldest son of full age, who likewise died in 1714, leaving the plaintiff his son and heir then about twelve years of age, who brought his bill for a redemption, but was dismissed: and the Lord Chancellor ordered it to be entered down as one of the reasons for dismissing the bill, that the plaintiff had no remedy by ejectment at law to recover the possession, being barred by the statute of limitations, and he thought that a reasonable ground for this court to follow as to the redemption in equity. Abr. Ca. Eq. 315.

But see the first of Will. Rep. 271, where if a mortgage was made never so many years since, yet if the mortgagor, and those claiming under him, had continued to pay interest, the length of time was in such case no objection to the right of redemption. See Abr. Ca. 313, 314, 317.

No agreement in a mortgage can make it irredeemable in equity, as after the death of the mortgagor, &c.

And where a mortgage was made redeemable during the mortgagor's life only, the Lord Chancellor decreed that the heir should redeem. 2 Chan. Rep. 127. Vern. Rep. 8. 190.

In Pearson's case the Lord Keeper said, he would have a rule to limit to what time a mortgage should be redeemable; and he conceived twenty years to be a fit time, in imitation of the statute of limitation of real actions. Chan. Ca. 102.

But a mortgagor was allowed to redeem a mortgage after fifty years, the length of time being excused by infancy, coverture, an account made up thirty years before, &c. Though this has been denied in a like case by reason of the difficulty of the account and great length of time. 2 Vern. 377. 418.

A mortgagor had liberty to redeem before the day of payment limited in the deed of mortgage, where the land was conveyed to the mortgagee conditionally at so much rent, and the increasing rent exceeded the interest of the money; and although the equity of redemption of lands mortgaged was foreclosed by decree signed and inrolled, and a purchase made upon it, yet another person was permitted to redeem on the extraordinary circumstances of the case. Vern. 183. Rep. Time Finch 406. 409.

(T) Where a Mortgagor concealing a former Incumbrance shall lose his Equity of Redemption.

BY stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 16. intituled, An act to prevent frauds by clandestine mortgages, it is recited, (§. 1) That whereas great frauds and deceits are too often practised by necessitous and evil-disposed persons, in borrowing of money, and giving judgments, statutes and recognizances privately for securing the repayment of the said money; and the same persons do afterwards borrow money upon security of their lands of other persons, and do not acquaint the latter lender thereof with the same, whereby such late lender is very often in danger to lose his whole money, or forced to pay off the debts secured by the said judgments, statutes and recognizances, before they can have any benefit of the said mortgages: And whereas divers persons do many times mortgage their lands more than once without giving notice of their first mortgage, whereby lenders of money upon second or after mortgages do often lose their money, and are put to great charges in suits and otherwise. And

(§. 2.) For remedy whereof, and preventing the same as much as may be for the future, it is enacted, That if any person from and after the first day of May 1693, shall borrow money, or for any other valuable consideration for the payment thereof voluntarily give, acknowledge, permit or suffer to be entered against him or them, one or more judgments, statute or statutes, recognizance or recognizances, to any person or persons creditor or creditors; and if the said borrower or borrowers, debtor or debtors, shall afterwards take up or borrow any other sum or sums of money of any other person or persons, or for other valuable considerations become indebted to such person or persons, and for securing the repayment and discharge thereof, shall mortgage his, her or their lands or tenements, or any part thereof, to the said second or other lender or lenders of the said money, creditor or creditors, or to any other person or persons in trust for or to the use of the said second or other lender or lenders, creditor or creditors, and shall not give notice to the first mortgagee or mortgagees of the said judgment or judgments, statute or statutes, recognizance or recognizances in writing, under his, her or their hand or hands, before the execution of the said mortgage or mortgages, unless such mortgagor or mortgagors, his, her or their heirs, upon notice to him, her or them given by the mortgagee or mortgagees of the aid lands and tenements, his, her or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, in writing under his, her or their hands and seals, attested by two or more sufficient witnesses, of any such former judgment or judgments, statute or statutes, recognizance or recognizances, shall within six months pay off and discharge the said judgment or judgments, statute or statutes, recognizance or recognizances, and all interest and charges due thereupon, and cause or procure the same to be vacated or discharged by record; that then the mortgagor or mortgagors of the said lands and tenements, his, her or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, shall have no benefit or remedy against the said mortgagee or mortgagees, his, her or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, or any of them, in equity or elsewhere, for redemption of the said lands and tenements, or any part thereof, but the said mortgagee or mortgagees, his, her or their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, shall and may hold and enjoy the said lands and tenements for such estate and term therein as were or was granted and settled to the said mortgagee or mortgagees, against the said mortgagor or mortgagors, and all person and persons lawfully claiming from, by or under him, her or them, freed from equity of redemption, and as fully to all intents and purposes whatsoever as if the same had been purchased absolutely and without any power or liberty of redemption.

(§. 3.) And it is further enacted, That if any person or persons who have or hath once mortgaged, or from and after the said first day of May shall mortgage any lands or tenements to any person or persons for security of money lent, or otherwise accrued or become due, or for other valuable considerations; and if the said mortgagor or mortgagors shall again mortgage the same lands or tenements, or any part thereof, to any other person or persons for valuable considerations, (the said former mortgage being in force, and not discharged), and shall not discover to the said second or other mortgagee or mortgagees, or one or one of them, the former mortgage or mortgages in writing under his or their hands, that then and in those cases also the said mortgagor or mortgagors, his, her or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, shall have no relief or equity of redemption against the said second or after mortgagee or mortgagees, his, her or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, upon the said after mortgage or mortgages, but that such mortgagee or mortgagees, his, her or their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, shall and may hold and enjoy such more than once mortgaged lands and tenements, for such estate and term therein as were or was granted and conveyed by the said mortgagor or mortgagors against him, her or them, his, her or their heirs, executors or administrators respectively, freed from equity of redemption, and as fully to all intents and purposes as if the same had been an absolute purchase, and without any other power or liberty of redemption.

(§. 5.) Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed, deemed or extended to bar any widow of any mortgagor of lands or tenements from her dower and right in or to the said lands, who did not legally join with her husband in such mortgage, or otherwise lawfully bar or exclude her from such her dower or right.

Where a Court at Law may relieve the Mortgagor (Ejectment for the Land, Actions on the Bonds for the Mortgage Money, Bills of Foreclosure, &c. being brought) on Payment of Principal, Interest and Costs.

Y Stat. 7 Geo. 2. c. 20. intituled, An act for the more easy redemption and foreclosure of mortgages, (§. 1.) it is recited, That whereas mortgagees frequently bring actions of ejectment for the recovery of lands and estates to them mortgaged, and bring actions on bonds given by mortgagors to pay the money secured by such mortgages, and for performance of the covenants therein contained, and likewise commence suits in his majesty's courts of equity to foreclose their mortgagors from redeeming their estates, and the courts of law where such ejectments are brought, have not power to compel such mortgagees to accept principal monies and interest due on such mortgages, and costs, or to stay such mortgagees from proceeding to judgment and execution in such actions; but such mortgagors have recourse to a court of equity for that purpose, in which case likewise the courts of equity do not give relief until the hearing of the cause: And for remedy thereof, and to state all objections relating to the same, it is enacted, That from and after the first day of the term 1734, where any action shall be brought on any bond for payment of the money secured by such mortgage, or performance of the covenants therein contained; or where any action of ejectment shall be brought in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, or in the court of great sessions in Wales, or in any of the superior courts in the counties palatine of Chester, Lancaster or Durham, by any mortgagee or mortgagees, his, her or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, for the recovery of the possession of any mortgaged lands, tenements or hereditaments; and no suit shall be then depending in any of his majesty's courts of equity, in that part of Great Britain called England, for or touching the foreclosing or redeeming of such mortgaged lands, tenements or hereditaments, if the person or persons having right to redeem such mortgaged lands, tenements or hereditaments, and who shall appear and become defendant or defendants in such action, shall at any time pending such action pay unto such mortgagee or mortgagees, or in case of his, her or their refusal, shall bring into court where such action shall be depending, all the principal monies and interest due on such mortgage, and also all such costs as have been expended in any suit or suits at law or in equity upon such mortgage, (such money for principal, interest and costs, to be ascertained and computed by the court where such action is or shall be depending, or by the proper officer, by such court to be appointed for that purpose), the monies so paid to such mortgagee or mortgagees, or brought into such court, shall be deemed and taken to be in full satisfaction and discharge of such mortgage; and the court shall and may discharge every such mortgagor or defendant of and from the same accordingly; and shall and may by rule or rules of the same court compel such mortgagee or mortgagees, at the costs and charges of such mortgagor or mortgagors, to assign, surrender or re-convey such mortgaged lands, tenements and hereditaments, and such estate and interest as such mortgagee or mortgagees have or hath therein, and deliver up all deeds, evidences and writings in his, her or their custody, relating to the title of such mortgaged lands, tenements and hereditaments, unto such mortgagor or mortgagors who shall have paid or brought such monies into the court, his, her, or their heirs, executors or administrators, or to such other person or persons, as he, she or they shall for that purpose nominate or appoint.

Equity will oblige the mortgagee to suffer the mortgagor to present to a living. Sira. 403.

(W) Where a Court of Equity may make a Decree on a Bill of Foreclosure before the Suit shall be brought to a regular Hearing.

AND by the said act (§. 2.) it is enacted, that from and after the first day of Easter Term 1734, where any bill or bills, suits or suits, shall be filed, commenced or brought in any of his majesty's courts of equity, in that part of Great Britain called England, by any person or persons having or claiming any estate, right or interest in any lands, tenements or hereditaments, under or by virtue of any mortgage or mortgages thereof, to compel the defendant or defendants in such suit or suits having or claiming a right to redeem the same) to pay the plaintiff or plaintiffs in such suit or suits the principal money and interest due on any such mortgage; or the principal money and interest due on such mortgage together with any sum or sums of money due on any incumbrance or specialty charged or chargeable on the equity of redemption thereof; and in default of payment thereof to foreclose such defendant or defendants of his, her or their right or equity of redeeming such mortgaged lands, tenements or hereditaments; such court and courts of equity where such suit or suits shall be depending, upon application made to such court by the defendant or defendants in such suit, having a right to redeem such mortgaged lands, tenements or hereditaments, and upon his or their admitting the right and title of the plaintiff or plaintiffs in such suit, may and shall at any time or times, before such suit or cause shall be brought to a hearing, make such order or decree therein as such court or courts might or could have made therein in case such suit or cause had then been regularly brought to hearing before such court or courts; and all parties to such suit or suits, shall be bound by such order or decree so made, to all intents and purposes, as if such order or decree had been made by such court at or subsequent to the hearing of such cause or suit; any usage to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

And by §. 3. it is provided, That this act, or any thing herein contained, shall not extend to any case where the person or persons against whom the redemption is or shall be prayed shall (by writing under his, her or their hands, or the hand of his, her or their attorney, agent or solicitor, to be delivered, before the money shall be brought into such court at law, to the attorney or solicitor for the other side) insist either that the party praying a redemption has not a right to redeem, or that the premises are chargeable with other or different principal sums than what appear on the face of the mortgage, or shall be admitted the other side, nor to any case where the right of redemption to the mortgaged lands and premises in question in any cause or suit shall be controverted or questioned by or between different defendants in the same cause or suit; nor shall be any prejudice to any subsequent mortgagee or mortgagees, or subsequent incumbrancer; any thing in this act contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

Decree to foreclose tenant in tail shall bind his issue in an equity of redemption, because that is a right set up only in a court of equity, and so may be here extinguished. Chan. Ca. 220.

Yet if there be an infant in the case, he ought not to be foreclosed without a day to shew cause after he comes of age; but the court may decree the lands to be sold to pay debts, and that will bind the infant. Vern. Rep. 295.

If an annuity be granted out of lands redeemable on payment of money, the grantor cannot be foreclosed of the land, but he may of the redemption of the annuity. Vern. 209, 210.

(X) Of Reconveyance of Mortgage on Payment of the Money. See before the Stat. 7 Geo. 2. c. 20.

ON a bill to compel a re-assignment of a mortgage from the 25th of September 1722, there having been then a tender made of 1000*l.* principal and interest; it appeared that on the day before the 25th of March 1722, the mortgagor gave personal notice in writing to the defendant the mortgagee, that he would tender the money and interest between the hours of ten and twelve in the morning, at Lincoln's-Inn Hall, on the 25th of September 1722, which accordingly was done. It was objected, that Lincoln's-Inn Hall was not named in the proviso in the mortgage deed as the place for the payment of the money, and therefore the tender must be to the person. By Lord Chancellor: The money being lent in town, and after personal notice given for the payment thereof, and no objection made by the mortgagee to the place at the time of the notice, it would be very hard to make the mortgagor travel with this great sum of money where the mortgagee lived; but in this case it ought to appear that the mortgagor from that time always kept the money ready; whereas the contrary thereof being proved that the mortgagor was not ready to pay it, therefore the interest must run on, and decreed the defendant to re-assign. 2 Will. 378.

A deed was in nature of a mortgage, with covenant to re-convey on paying the money, which was tendred at the day and place, and refused: The money without interest from the tender, and to re-convey the land, &c. was decreed; but that the plaintiff ought to make oath that the money was kept, and no profit made of it. 2 Chan. Ca. 206.

The statute of limitations is no bar to ejectment on a mortgage where the interest has been paid. Ld. Raym. 740.
